She would have been willing, she said, to elope if the right young man had come along and offered himself. Alone, however, she saw no chance to roam until she hit on the plan of wearing trousers. She applied for a position on a dining car and was accepted, and it was several months before her sex was discovered. Then she was dropped from the payroll and from the train.

TEACHER SAYS HE WAS DAMAGED

Homer I. Watts Sues Jerry Stone for Damages in the Sum of $4600

ALLEGES TEACHING REPUTATION IS DAMAGED

Former Principal of Athena Schools, and Late Candidate for School Superintendent, Declares He Is Unable to Secure Employment as a Teacher as Result of Influence of Former Member of Legislature—Watts Also Alleges He Has Been Greatly Irritated and Annoyed.

Claiming that Jerry Stone has wrongfully damaged his reputation as a school teacher and also as a lawyer, Homer I. Watts, former principal of the schools at Athena, has started a damage suit in the circuit court and asks for a judgment against Stone for the sum of $4600.

In the complaint, which was filed today by Watts himself, it is set forth that the plaintiff holds a life teacher's diploma and is also duly admitted to practice law in this state.

Jerry Stone is characterized as a "man much believed and relied upon by people of the county as a truth-giver and as a proctor of the good morals of the community—a man of wealth and of influence which is felt beyond this state."

The particular offense charged against him is that on December 1, 1907, while Watts was serving as principal of the Athena schools, he, Stone, caused to be published and circulated a slanderous, scandalous and libelous story concerning the plaintiff. In effect this story was that Watts had disregarded the instructions of the Athena school board; that he had also used profane language on the streets of Athena, and had called pupils by various offensive names.

Because of this alleged libel the plaintiff complains that he has found it impossible to secure further employment as a teacher and on this ground he is damaged to the extent of $1600. He then asks for the sum of $3000 in addition because he alleges that the defendant acted against him for the purpose of annoying and injuring him.
