AMONG THE EXCHANGES OF THE INLAND EMPIRE

Hotel Man a Bootlegger.
Because he failed to heed the warning of Special Officers Sam Cone and Joseph Matulya to the effect the government would continue the fight against the liquor traffic on the Nez Perce Indian reservation until all of the bootleggers were either run out of the country or sent to prison, Thomas Craig, hotel keeper at Vollmer, is under arrest on a charge of introducing liquor, and a considerable quantity of beer was seized in the Craig building and will be used as evidence against the defendant before the federal court, says the Lewiston Teller.

Craig moved to the reservation at the time the open saloons were licensed. He erected a fine hotel building and bought a fine line of furniture to fit up the establishment. He had opened a barroom in connection with the hotel, but shortly after this the Dick decision closed all saloons on the reserve and the bottom dropped out of the hotel business at Vollmer. Mr. Craig then came to Lewiston and applied for a saloon license to open an establishment in the Squire building, but the action of the council at that time in limiting the number of saloons prevented his engaging in business in Lewiston.

The arrest was made at Vollmer early yesterday, when the officers swooped into the town after an all-night's ride across Craig mountain by private conveyance.

Inspect Soda Fountains.

The supplies in the Lewiston soda fountains are being inspected today by State Pure Food Commissioner J. R. Fields, and several shipments of goods will be sent out of the state because of not complying with the pure food laws, says the Lewiston Teller. Mr. Fields has been in the northern part of the state for the past month making a thorough inspection of the milk supplies, the prepared meats and the soda fountain supplies. Mr. Fields also occupies the position of state horticultural inspector, but is only attending to these duties in a general way on the present trip. The cherry slug, which is taking the leaves from many of the Clarkston orchards, is a matter that has been brought to the attention of Mr. Fields, who states the cherry slug is one of the pests most easily destroyed. He recommends an arsenic spray to be used when the fruit is very small, and by the time the slug appears on the leaf the poison is there to destroy it. He states the spraying cannot be done when the slug appears, as this is generally about the time the fruit begins to ripen and a poisonous solution would render the fruit unfit for use.

A Pitiful Case.

Mrs. Barr arrived in the city from Chehalis, Saturday, says The Dalles Chronicle. Mr. Barr, she says, is a locomotive engineer and being out of work decided to come to The Dalles, and said he would work his way from Chehalis to Portland on an engine, and from Portland to The Dalles. He bought his wife a ticket from Chehalis to either Hood River or The Dalles. Anyday, Mrs. Barr came to this city Saturday, and did not find her husband here, as he agreed to meet her at this place. She told her story to the chief of police, and he got her accommodations at a rooming house on Third street. Mrs. Barr told her story to the policeman; told how she had married the first time in Tennessee when only 14 years old, and of her husband dying, and of her marrying the second time to the man who was to have met her here. The poor little woman is only 20 years old at this time and weighs about 90 pounds. Her mind seems to be unbalanced and the authorities will keep her here a day or so before her sanity is questioned further.

Sheepman Lost All.

While attempting to ford the Boise river at Ross' ford about 20 miles above the capital city, a sheepman and his family narrowly escaped drowning yesterday, the water being higher than thought for, and upsetting the sheepman's outfit and carrying it down stream with the driver fighting frantically to cut the horses free of the harness while his family struggled from the water to the bank, says a Boise paper.

The outfit valued at about $500 was a total loss, the sheepman, whose name could not be ascertained, being unable to cut the team loose from the harness before the horses were drowned and the wagon and contents broken up and swept down the stream by the current. The fight of the driver to release the horses from the outfit so that they might escape to the bank was maintained for two miles on a half, only being given up when it was apparent that the horses could not drag themselves from the water.

OREGON VINEYARD TO RIVAL CALIFORNIA

The Portland chamber of commerce Bulletin prints the following excellent article on grape culture in southern Oregon:

Almost a million grapevines have been planted on the hill slopes of southern Oregon in the past year. The grape craze, as it is popularly called, is superseding the gold craze, and it is interesting to note that many of the best vineyards are thriving on ground that was worked in the early days for the precious yellow metal.

The variety that has proved its superiority in southern Oregon is the Flaming Tokay. It has also been found that the celebrated American grape, the Concord, as well as many of the more delicate varieties, such as the Malvoises, Rose of Peru, Black Hamburg, Golden Chasselas and others thrive on the red lands of southern Oregon. The conditions of soil, altitude and climate are almost identical with that of the famous wine-producing sections of Italy and France.

Vineyardists are finding the south hill slopes of the Rogue River valley, particularly those red land and granite districts of Josephine and Jackson counties, to be ideal grape lands. The soil is warm, of good depth and well drained, three prime requisites for successful grape culture. These foothill lands, even though the loam may have a depth of only two feet, with a slope to the south or southwest, and lying at an elevation of from 100 to 2500 feet, are splendid locations for vineyards. The grape, to mature, and to reach the highest point of excellence as to color, size and flavor, must be grown in an equable temperature, with ample sunshine, and the south, southeast and southwest hill slopes of Rogue River valley meet these requirements.

Pay Five Hundred Dollars to Acre. It has been demonstrated by vineyardists that have been in operation for several years that southern Oregon south hill lands, when planted to the vine and properly cared for, pay from $200 to $500 per acre. There are thousands of acres of such hill lands still unused in southern Oregon—lands that will make as fine vineyards as those already in operation.

A splendid feature of grape culture in this region is that it does not require irrigation; in truth, the vine bears a grape of better quality if given only thorough cultivation without water. These lands, unencumbered, can be bought for from $10 to $25 an acre; the price cleared is $20 to $30 an acre.

The cost of planting, cultivating and general attention may be summarized as follows: 535 vines, the number required, per acre ..... $15.00 Plowing, pulverizing, preparing for plants, per acre ..... 4.00 Cultivation first year, per acre ..... 4.00 After the first year the cost of cultivating (pruning and spraying) is but $6 per acre. For cultivating the successful vineyardists of southern Oregon use a sort of spring-tooth harrow or cultivator, built for the purpose, and of a width to accommodate the rows.

This cultivator, drawn by two horses, covers the largest vineyard in a short time, cultivating it thoroughly and it is an operation that is performed regularly at least once a week during the entire summer season. Frequent cultivation keeps the soil well pulverized, promotes capillary action and keeps the moisture near the surface.

The best market grape for this section is the Flaming Tokay. It is an extremely popular grape. It is a good shipping grape, and, best of all, it attains a size, flavor and color not surpassed by any other variety. The fall rains are always deferred in southern Oregon to a date that allows ample time for ripening, gathering and marketing.

The growers have never had any trouble to dispose of their entire crop and could place many times the amount now grown. If all the hill slopes of southern Oregon were set in vines, a ready market for the whole output could still be found in the east, shipping by carload, as is done with the famous Rogue River valley apples and pears.

Grapes, like apples and pears, to derive the best price, must be neatly and correctly packed. In this work the successful grower never slights the smallest detail. The neatest boxes, the best labels and the finest lithograph paper are used. Packed in this manner and placed on the market, they not merely sell, but command the very highest prices.

THE AMOUNT OF YOUR "BELIEF IN ADVERTISING" WHICH IS PUT INTO TYPE IS WHAT COUNTS.

There is probably a clothing ad in today's paper that will remind you that your new suit is overdue. Meet the ad "face to face," and it will help you to meet the clothes problem that way.

It won't pay you to try to deal with a buyer who wants your property only half as much as "the right man" would want it.

Your store is NOT "big enough," or prosperous enough, unless your ambition and aspirations are under-sized.
