WAR BONDS MAY BECOME AN ISSUE

SECRETARY CORTELYOU MAY FURNISH THUNDER.

Alleged Decision to Postpone Redemption of the Three Per Cent Paper Will Give Democrats Chance to Holler — Bryan Himself May Take Up the Cry.

Washington, July 30.—A new issue may arise in the coming presidential campaign, owing to the alleged decision of Secretary Cortelyou to postpone the redemption of the 3 per cent Spanish war bonds when they fall due day after tomorrow. It is stated on good authority that Mr. Cortelyou, for various reasons, has decided to allow the bonds to run on for an indefinite period before redeeming them or refunding them into 2 per cent bonds. It is certain that such a course, if finally decided upon, will result in a good deal of criticism and that the opponents of the administration will not overlook the opportunity for making political capital out of it. It is alleged on behalf of Secretary Cortelyou that the bonds can not be refunded to a good advantage at this time and that he does not consider it advisable to purchase them for the sinking fund.

There are about $65,000,000 of the bonds outstanding, a total of nearly $200,000,000 having been issued during the Spanish war to run ten years. Most of the bonds are in the hands of the treasurer of the United States in trust as security for the circulation of national banks. To continue them after August 1 will necessitate the payment of close to $2,000,000 a year in interest. Converted into 2 per cent bonds, which the secretary has authority to do, the annual interest charge would be $1,300,000. Paid off altogether the government would be saved further interest.

Bryan Will Criticize.

It is regarded as practically a certainty that the democratic campaign management, probably Mr. Bryan himself, will criticize the failure to pay off the bonds, if they should be left outstanding after August 1. Secretary Cortelyou's reasons for delaying their purchase are said to be numerous, but the democratic criticism will be based upon the plain allegation that the government has plenty of cash on hand to pay them off, thus retiring the bonded indebtedness, and that they are continued for the benefit of the national banks.

The working balance of the treasury at this time is $64,000,000. That is, the various vaults contain that much money, not in use, except to meet daily expenditures, which are at present largely to excess of revenues. The $64,000,000 will meet deficits for many weeks to come, as well as many months. But the treasury has a large available cash balance in national bank depositories. These institutions now hold $138,777,462 of government money, besides another $11,900,000 as balances for disbursing officers. The banks could be called upon without serious detriment at this time, it is pointed out, for sufficient money to pay off the 3 per cents, if refunding was not considered.

Every day the treasury is making advances out of its cash to the Panama canal, and it is simply a question of waiting for a propitious occasion before putting more Panama bonds upon the market to meet the balance due and to provide funds for continuing work.

The Remedy That Does.

"Dr. King's New Discovery is the remedy that does the healing others promise, but fail to perform," says Mrs. E. R. Pierson, of Auburn Center, Pa. "It is curing me of throat and lung trouble of long standing, that other treatments relieve only temporarily. New Discovery is doing me so much that I feel confident its continued use for a reasonable length of time will restore me to perfect health." This renowned cough and cold remedy and throat and lung healer is sold at Tallman & Co.'s drug store. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

College Prosperous.

Milton, July 30.—Rev. H. S. Shangle, financial agent of the Columbia college at Milton, has gone to Spokane and the Palouse country in the interest of the school. He reports prospects for a large attendance in the school during the coming year to be better than they have been at any time at this season of the year since the establishment of the college eight years ago.

The lawn fete held on the college campus last evening was a very enjoyable affair and was well attended.

Costly Jar of the Gubway. The tuppenny tube, London's subway, once set fire to a house in a manner so extraordinary as to merit attention. In a mansion, beneath which runs the subterranean railway one of the bedroom fireplaces was fitted with a blower—a sheet of iron inside the grate which can be raised or lowered to regulate the draft. The blower rested on a series of iron notches. One afternoon a servant kindled a fire in the grate and when it was well alight raised the blower, so that the coal would burn but slowly, and so left it while she went downstairs. Presently, deep in the clay beneath the foundations of the house, a train rushed along. The vibrations from its passing were sufficient to jar the blower from the notches on which the servant had left it. It dropped down. The draft increased; the fire raged madly. The flames were enough to set the chimney on fire, burning soot set the water tank on the roof alight, and there resulted a considerable conflagration.—Pittsburg Post.

A Girl and a Snake.

It is a matter of fact that men have greater fear of serpents than have women. During a visit to friends in the country I was crossing a stretch of meadow in the company of my hostess' daughter, a sprightly girl of seventeen, when a black snake crossed the path ten feet in front of us. I caught my companion by the sleeve, but she wrenched herself loose, gathered her skirts about her knees, gave a running jump and landed squarely upon the back of the reptile. His snakeship thrashed the grass and the girl's ankles with equal futility. As soon as she could disengage one foot she planted it upon the serpent's head. In the absence of club or stones I was compelled to stand and witness a scene that to me was terrifying, but to the girl furnished supreme enjoyment. Years afterward when I read Haggard's description of Jess' fight with the kangaroo I understood the kind of entertainment that my young companion had provided for me.—Brooklyn Eagle.

There's a Hare in the Moon.

Equally famous with the man in the moon and the woman in the moon is the hare in the moon, says Garrett P. Serviss in his "Astronomy With the Naked Eye." The original is a Buddhist legend. The god Sakkrin, disguised as a Brahman, pretended to be starving and went to the animals for help. The monkey got him a bunch of mangoes; the goat picked up a fisherman's neglected string for him; the fox stole him a pot of milk. At last the god approached the hare. "I have nothing but grass," said the hare, "and you can't eat that." "But your flesh is good," suggested the pretended Brahman. The hare assented. "Then," said the Brahman, "I'll kindle a fire at the foot of this rock, and you jump off into it. That'll save me the trouble of killing you." The hare assented again, but as he leaped from the rock the god caught him in his arms and then drew his figure in the moon as a perpetual reminder of the excellence of self sacrifice.

Cerebral Embolism.

Cerebral embolism, or the occlusion or plugging of an artery in the brain, causes sudden death. Growths or vegetations form on the valves of the heart. While attached they are harmless, but the instant one, large or small, becomes loosened and enters the rapid arterial current a very perilous condition obtains. The embolus, or plug, enters a vessel that becomes narrower and narrower and at last it is arrested and occludes or plugs the artery, thereby cutting off the blood supply. The force of the blood current back of the embolus keeps it at the seat of arrest. In brain cases the middle cerebral artery, at the base of the brain, is affected. Once lodged unconsciousness follows and soon death. Some of the symptoms resemble those of a true cerebral hemorrhage or apoplexy.—New York Herald.

A Quaint English Ceremony.

On the last day of each October the city solicitor of London, with an assistant, attends upon the royal remembrancer, when by proclamation "the tenants and occupiers of a piece of waste ground called the moors, in the county of Salop," are commanded to "come forth and do your service upon pain and peril that shall fall thereon." The solicitor chops in halves two fagots, one with a hatchet and the other with a billhook. Afterward comes the summons to the tenants, etc., of "a certain tenement with a forge" in the Strand and the payment of six horse-shoes, with sixty-one shoe nails, by the solicitor. This forge has long ceased to be, and the same shoes and nails are used year after year, the shoes being at least two centuries old.

Spell This.

Some of you who think you are well up in spelling just try to spell the words in this little sentence: "It is agreeable to witness the unparalleled ecstasy of two harassed peddlers endeavoring to gauge the symmetry of two peeled pears." Read it over to your friends and see how many of them can spell every word correctly. The sentence contains some of the real puzzlers of the spelling book.

BIG DRY DOCK AT NAVY YARD

MARE ISLAND WILL HAVE $1,450,000 DOCK.

Will Be Completed Next January—Built of Concrete Throughout—12-260 Oregon Fir Piles Driven From 20 to 40 Feet Under Water Into 20 or 40 Feet of Mud.

Washington, July 30.—The $1,450,000 dry dock for the Mare Island navy yard, now in course of construction at Vallejo, Cal., will be completed in January. Francis B. Smith, constructing engineer for the contract, was in Washington this week conferring with officials of the navy department. The new dock will be of concrete throughout, and Smith talks interestingly of the difficulties which the contractors have encountered.

"In the foundation of the dock," he said, "we used 12,260 piles of Oregon fir, driven 40 feet under water into from 20 to 40 feet of earth. Upon that foundation we built a concrete dock—but only after repeated failures.

"The construction of a dock of this size and character is a prodigious undertaking. The contractors which I represent are the second ones to take hold of the matter, and already the dock has been in process of construction for nine years."

Smith brings with him to Washington the coast antipathy to the Japs, and is enthusiastically for the further fortification of the Pacific gateway to America. Still, he naively remarks,

"I think one good American can lick three Japanese, if it comes to a fight."

UNCLE SAM TAKING STOCK.

Will Soon Be Able to Estimate Resources of United States.

Washington, July 30.—"Three rivers at ten millions apiece. Got it? "Steen forest reserves at a couple of millions each."

"Forty-eleven thousand acres of mineral lands at—"

But no matter about the details. Uncle Sam is taking stock of his natural resources and in a few months, for the first time in history, he will be able to estimate closely just about how much he is worth.

The national conservation committee, appointed by President Roosevelt less than two months ago, has been mighty busy and the work is being pushed with such rapidity that it is expected that President Roosevelt will have a complete invoice of Uncle Sam's resources by the first of next year.

A large amount of material embracing the subject of conservation—waters, forests, lands and minerals—already is available in the various executive departments, the heads of which have offered hearty co-operation in the great task the commission has undertaken. Other important data will be collected through special channels, including state, conservation commissions now being formed, and some of the great national organizations represented at the White House conference recently.

By early fall the commission expects to have in hand sufficient material to begin the study of the inventory of the country's resources, and by the middle of October, it hopes to have the greater part of this material in hand, so that the full commission which will hold its first meeting December 1, may at once take up the study of the facts the summer's work has brought together.

One week later the commission will hold a joint meeting in Washington with the governors of the states, or their representatives, with the view of securing further and closer co-operation with the various state commissions.
