TRIPLETS THRICE, SAME HOUSE.

Pennsylvania Dwelling Favorite Stamping Ground for Stork.
The village of Industry, near McKeesport, Ill., boasts of a house which the stork has visited three times, in each instance bringing triplets. The last "set" came today to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Spangler, and consists of two boys and a girl. The boys are named William Jennings and Theodore Roosevelt, while the girl has not been christened yet, says a Pittsburgh dispatch to the Tribune.
Three years ago Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Engelson occupied the house, which is near the streetcar terminal. Three boys increased the family's size in one day. A year ago Mr. and Mrs. Spangler succeeded the Engelsons. The first set of triplets was born to a foreign woman, who has since removed from Industry.

MANY WOMEN SEEK PLACES.

Census Bureau Swamped With Applications for Enumerators.
A Washington dispatch says of the enormous number of applications for position of census enumerators:
In spite of the fact that it will require the services of 70,000 men and women to take the next census of the population and resources of the country, Director of the Census North has already received twice as many applications for work on the force as there are positions. He puts in nearly half of his time now answering the applications for jobs that are coming in from every state in the union.
A force of 3500 extra clerks will be employed in this city, and, in addition to these, there will have to be employed 65,000 enumerators in the field. The remainder of the 70,000 is made up of district supervisors and other superintendents of the work.
The flood of applications for positions is largely accounted for by the fact that, by the terms of the act of congress passed in the last session affecting the census, there is no civil service requirements for the work. It turned out to be a boomerang. The members cannot find enough places to meet the demand, and Director North is tearing his hair in an endeavor to meet the demands of the congressmen and the wishes of the public.
A striking fact is that nearly 75 per cent of the applicants for work are women, showing that the lure of the government job is much stronger with women than with men. This is probably true because the salaries paid by the government to women are higher than those paid to them by private concerns.

MRS. GOULD'S TENDER HEART.

A Little Story of Her Kindness and Generosity to Her Former Friends.
A pretty little story about Mrs. George J. Gould is going the rounds. "During the early months of last winter, Mrs. Gould while driving through Central Park was attracted to the strained attitude of an elderly woman who, despite the arctic temperature, was seated upon one of the iron benches, apparently indifferent to her surroundings," says a writer in the New Idea Woman's Magazine for July. She was clad, and the blue pinched features told of insufficient nutrition.
Something in the pose seemed familiar to Mrs. Gould. Memories of other days flooded her soul. Suddenly an imperative "Stop!" and the next moment she had imprisoned the cold hands in her warm, soft ones, exclaiming, "Why, 'Jingies,' where have you been all these years?" The poor woman started back, gave a rapid glance at the beautifully-gowned form beside her, and endeavored to withdraw her hands, murmuring a few incoherent words.
With a firmer pressure Mrs. Gould insisted: "Surely you must remember me, Edith Kingdon, whom you knew in the dear old days." For answer, there was a piteous burst of tears, and realizing that this was the time for action, not words, Mrs. Gould, shivering shoulders, drew her into the carriage, covered her to the eyes in costly furs and gave the order "Home!"

FORESTERS SAVE MILLIONS.

Thousands of Wild Animals Slain Each Year.
An important feature of the work of the forestry bureau is the killing of wild animals that destroy stock. Will C. Barnes in an article in the July McClure's says:
In the year 1907, according to records kept of all predatory animals killed upon the various national forests, or on lands adjoining them, no fewer than 1600 wolves, 19,400 coyotes, 265 mountain lions, 368 bears and 2285 wildcats and lynxes were killed by the various hunters and settlers. Of these, it is probably fair to credit the rangers and the hunters employed by the forest service with at least one-fourth.
Now, any well-posted stockman will tell you that, on an average, a full-grown wolf will destroy $1000 worth of stock every year of its life. Mountain lions prefer horses to any other food, but still they will put up with calves and sheep. They, too, are easily chargeable with $1000 worth of damage each year.
The coyotes, bob-cats and lynxes do less harm, and that mostly to sheep. Yet I think it is a very conservative estimate to say that each coyote or lynx annually destroys stock to the value of fully $100.
Taking these figures as a basis for comparison it is very easily seen that the value of the animals killed by the forest service men, is more than $1,000,000. Hence, so far as return for their $536,920 in grazing fees is concerned, the stockmen get it back in full and with some to spare.
It is estimated that 500 harvest hands can find ready employment in the grain fields of Nez Perce county, Idaho. The grain crop is said to be the largest of recent years.

"Known For Its Strength"

What It Means

Many people do not know what a bank's capital means to its depositors, or the difference between a bank of little or no capital, and one with a large capital. One of the functions of

is to protect its depositors from possible loss; therefore the larger it is, the greater protection the depositors have.

This bank has a

Capital of	200,000.00
Surplus Fund of	50,000.00
Undivided Profits	25,000.00
Additional Shareholders
Liability	200,000.00

A TOTAL OF 475 000.00

This means that this bank must lose practically half a million dollars before its depositors could lose a cent.

LIFE-LINE EXPERIMENTS.

British Tests of Kites, Balloon, Cannon and Shoulder Guns.
Consul John L. Griffiths of Liverpool, advises that the advisory subcommittee appointed by the British government to formulate a report upon the question of British ships compulsorily carrying life-line throwing apparatus conducted some most interesting experiments in Liverpool recently, the results of which are briefly described:
The apparatus submitted comprised kites, buoys and different styles of guns and rockets. The first tests were those of West's drift buoys, which were followed by the much-improved Regurk box kite. It was the opinion of those who witnessed the experiments that the kite is a successful invention and will be very serviceable when the wind is blowing on a lee shore. One of the most interesting of the tests was made with a balloon constructed of gold beater's skin in two weights. It carried a line for 1500 yards. The principal tests, however, were made with rockets, cannon and shoulder guns, which have been carried to a high state of perfection. Much interest was shown in the results of these tests, both by the committee and the nautical experts.
The cannon threw a line a distance of 310 fathoms, which indicates the standard of efficiency to which it has been brought. A projectile is inserted in the cannon, and the cannon is fired by means of a friction tube which propels the projectile a certain distance, and from that point a rocket is discharged which carries the line to its destination. The gun is portable and is easily handled. Another interesting feature is that during the daytime the smoke indicates the direction in which the line is carried, while at night the fire of the rocket denotes the direction. For shore use this gun can be placed on a small hand barrow; and as there are no elaborate accessories, it can be readily worked by any person of ordinary intelligence. This gun is claimed to be the most satisfactory apparatus for heavy work, as, for example, from the deck of large liners.
Two shoulder guns impressed the experts present as the most satisfactory of those produced. They are light, easily handled and may be fired from any position by a man or boy. The more powerful of the two guns carries a line 345 feet and the other 342 feet. (Illustrations of the shoulder gun and rocket cannon, as well as the names of their inventors, and that of the balloon, are filed at the bureau of manufactures.)
