

CLOSE VIEW OF WARSAW BY IDAHO MAN

George N. Ifft, proprietor of the Pocatello Tribune, who is American consul at a small city in Northern Germany, has visited Warsaw, Poland, and writes the following highly interesting sketch of the city for his paper:

Armed with a correct visaged passport from the department of state and an open letter from the Russian consul general of Berlin, I have succeeded in breaking into Russia and for three days now have gone about the streets of Warsaw, the capital of ancient Poland—a huge, sprawling city of about 800,000 population on the banks of the muddy Vistula. The scene of the latest terror, where bombs were tossed about like tennis balls and the streets were the scenes of bloody combats—where on the very evening of my arrival a young anarchist accidentally dropped a bomb which he was carrying along a busy street, blowing himself to pieces and seriously injuring a half dozen passers by, it is still the home of a care-free and pleasure loving people, who throng the streets and parks in the evenings or sit in open air cafes listening to concerts.

Thousands of droskies, drawn by sleek little ponies, run up and down the streets all hours of the day and night, absolutely without order, twisting in and out among each other so that an attempt to cross the street is absolutely a dangerous undertaking. The carriages of the Russian nobles, low, little wagons with the horses hitched under a great yoke of bent wood over their necks and drivers so padded that their rear view is something like the view of the north end of an elephant going south, and attenuated country wagons drawn by scrawny looking horses; dinky little horse cars and an occasional electric train added variety to the scene.

The foot passengers are even more motley in appearance—well dressed men and women, gaudily bedecked public women and girls from the dance halls, miserable and hideous beggars, soldiers in fifty varieties of uniforms, Jews, all in coats that come to their ankles, and skull caps, some prosperous looking, many in miserable rags, some with ringlets and many who bow cringingly with uncovered heads as you pass and at the same time curse you under their breath with that awful curse of the Hebrew—may your incoming and outgoing be accursed, your waking and sleeping; may bolts break out on the back of your neck, your hair fall out and your children and children's children to the utmost generation be accursed.

I never imagined that the things I have seen on these streets existed. The beggars are, perhaps, the most awful. They throng the streets and crowd the steps of the many churches—exhibiting hideous deformities, loathsome rags, the hideousness of neglected old age.

Often they mumble prayers by the hours, tell strings of beads with trembling and dirty hands, hold out dirty caps, bowing and whining their tales of misery, which, thank God, I can't understand. Indescribably dirty urchins follow you for blocks, screeching their petitions and kissing your elbow at every opportunity.

Miserable and ragged women with more miserable babies hanging to their flat breasts cling to your coat tails and can't be shaken off. The dirty, ragged Jew is even more miserable in appearance. He begs out his begging petition, but splits in scorn when he has received the kopek for which he asked.

The Jewish quarters are miserable and dirty and swarm like hives. The streets are narrow, and I often see 15 and 20 people working in a miserable hole not more than 10 by 15 feet. Seventy-five per cent of the people are absolutely illiterate—can neither read nor write, but all are bilingual, speaking both Polish and Russian, and to this the Jews all add that peculiar German-Hebrew dialect known as Yiddish.

It is a most peculiar feeling to be engulfed by a continual babble of sound, not a single utterance of which has the slightest meaning to me, but I am acquiring some felicity in sign language and manage to fage pretty well.

The contrasting picture is most vivid. The city is one of the noble old palaces, stately Orthodox Greek churches with gilded towers, imposing Roman Catholic cathedrals, a celebrated university, dignified government buildings, museums and art galleries, beautiful parks, heroic statues of Copernicus, who evolved a system of the universe still accepted today; of Mickiewicz, a poet of world-wide fame, etc.

Soldiers patrol the streets; mounted Cossacks dash madly back and forth and officers in gay uniforms throng the cafes. The only touch of home I have seen was something like a thousand Cossacks pass up the main street yesterday. They were clad in ka-ki, mounted on warty little ponies that looked much like our cow ponies at home, and strange to say the Cossacks ride like cowboys—the only men I have seen in Europe who know how to ride.

The city is still under martial law evidence. I have, however, seen nothing but good order, but am constantly warned to keep to the main streets and not to walk about late at night.

There is really no need for walking much, for the drosky cabs will haul you any place for 20 kopeks (10 cents) and if you want to be regarded as nobles you add 5 kopeks (2½ cents) to the fare. Otherwise I have found nothing that is cheap, and the graft of the tip is about 100 per cent worse than in Germany, where I had thought it was the limit.

Cured Hay Fever and Summer Cold.

A. S. Nesbaum, Batesville, Indiana, writes: "Last year I suffered for three months with a summer cold so distressing that it interfered with my business. I had many of the symptoms of hay fever, and a doctor's prescription did not reach my case, and I took several medicines which only seemed to aggravate it. Fortunately, I insisted upon having Foley's Honey and Tar. It quickly cured me. My wife has since used Foley's Honey and Tar with the same success. Pendleton Drug Company."

Missouri Farmers Organize.

Springfield, Mo., Aug. 11.—One of the most representative gatherings ever held in the agricultural interests of the state marked the opening today of the first annual convention of the Missouri Farmers' union. The state union is affiliated with the national organization and has had a remarkable growth during the last year. Organizers are now reported to be pushing the work in every county of the state. It is expected that at the present meeting it will be decided to establish a newspaper organ of the union. The organization is based on economic lines and has for its purpose the restriction of crops and the maintenance of prices for agricultural products.

How to Avoid Appendicitis.

Most victims of appendicitis are those who are habitually constipated. Foley's Orino Laxative cures chronic constipation by stimulating the liver and bowels and restores the natural action of the bowels. Foley's Orino Laxative does not nauseate or gripe and is mild and pleasant to take. Refuse substitutes. Pendleton Drug Company.

Alabama Masons.

Decatur, Ala., Aug. 11.—A meeting of the Masons of this district was commenced here today and will last three days. The unwritten work of the fraternity will be remonstrated and officers elected. It is expected that a considerable addition will be made to the fund for building a widows' and orphans' home at Montgomery.

Attention, Asthma Sufferers.

Foley's Honey and Tar will give immediate relief to asthma sufferers and has cured many cases that had refused to yield to other treatment. Foley's Honey and Tar is the best remedy for coughs, colds and all throat and lung trouble. Contains no harmful drugs. Pendleton Drug Company.

To Boom the South.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Aug. 11.—A permanent organization of a co-operative nature for the development of the entire South will be formed as the result of the assemblage here today of secretaries and officers of leading commercial organizations of Dixie. A session of three days has been provided for by the Chattanooga commercial bodies.

A Boon to Elderly People.

Most elderly people have some kidney or bladder disorder that is both painful and dangerous. Foley's Kidney Remedy has proven a boon to many elderly people, as it stimulates the urinary organs, corrects irregularities and tones up the whole system. Commence taking Foley's Kidney Remedy at once and be vigorous. Pendleton Drug Company.

Eagles in Seattle.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 11.—Eagles from many states are in Seattle today to join with the Washington members of the order in a four-day celebration and a session of the grand aerle.

Foley's Kidney Remedy will cure any case of kidney or bladder trouble that is not beyond the reach of medicine. No medicine can do more. Pendleton Drug Company.
