Next time you buy clothes, no matter

where you go, or what makers' name is on the garment, ask if it's all-wool. Don't be put off without a plain answer. The clothier may say—"You know me; you know I wouldn't sell you anything that wasn't all right;" but that doesn't answer the question. Does it?

If he says "yes," you can't tell, perhaps, whether it is all-wool or not; he may think it is; maybe he doesn't know.

There's only one sure way of knowing what you're getting in clothes this fall, aside from a chemical test of the fabrics; and that way is to buy goods that are guaranteed by the maker to be all-wool and all the rest that goes with it.

We offer you Hart, Schaffner & Marx's clothes because the makers dare to take a positive ground on the quality question; they don't dodge; they don't keep silent; they are positive in their statement and in their facts. You can depend on them; and us.

RESERVATIONS TO BE OPENED

IDAHO INDIAN LANDS FOR SETTLEMENT.

Coeur d'Alene, Lemhi and Fort Hall Indian Reservations Are Being Surveyed Preparatory to Being Thrown Open to Settlement—Finest Lands in Idaho Are Included in Reservations.

No less than three of the largest Indian reservations in the state of Idaho will be thrown open for settlement probably during the next year, or those of the Fort Hall, Lemhi and Coeur d'Alene, according to information obtained today from Frank Spofford, examiner of surveys in the surveyor general's department, who has been making a tour of inspection in the Fort Hall Indian reservation near Pocatello, where the government has ordered the department to survey and mark out the various townships preparatory to opening this fine tract of land for settlement, says the Boise Capital News.

Mr. Spofford cannot make this statement definite owing to the fact that it lies entirely within the power of the department to act on the opening of Indian reservations, but the indications point to the fact that the government is anxious to complete the surveys on all these reservations so that they can be opened as soon as possible.

Mr. Spofford stated that he found the survey work in the Fort Hall reservation very satisfactory, and as he was all over the country included in this reservation, for 39 townships and a fraction, he is in a position to tell some interesting facts about the land. The Fort Hall reservation formerly included the city and township of Pocatello, but both were taken out some time ago.

The Blackfoot and Bannock Indians once the two fiercest tribes of redskins that roamed the plains of Idaho, own this land, having been confined there for some years past. Now they are to have their last reservation cut into townships and unit farms of 80 acres and sold to the white men.

The government protects the Indians in this segregation of this land by allowing each one, many squaws and children, 80 acres of land which is held in trust by the government for 25 years, so that it cannot be transferred or sold to prospective land grabbers.

Each Indian or family, is then supposed to take care of the land and farm it like the white men. There are a number of Carlisle graduates among both tribes and they are assisting their fellows in taking up the art of farming. The Lemhi tribe has also been transferred to this reservation, where they are also to be allotted land.

At the present time Mr. Spofford states that an irrigation project is being built to irrigate the land in this project, taking water for the same out of the Blackfoot river, which flows in a sort of semicircle about the northern boundary of the reservation. This will give the land plenty of water.

An analysis of the soil proves that it is the richest to be found in this state and especially adapted to the raising of wheat. Mr. Spofford speaks very enthusiastically of the country and states that it includes some of the best land he has ever seen. He claims that it is very similar to the Palouse country in richness.

Surveys are also being made on the Lemhi reservation which is located in the central eastern part of Lemhi county and borders on the Montana state line. The land in this reservation is also of a very fine agricultural character.

The Coeur d'Alene reservation, located in Kootenai county, is one of the largest to be found in the west, and when the survey is completed here and the allotment made to the Indians, who at present hold it, it is proposed to throw it open for settlement. All of the land in the three reservations will have to be homesteaded under the homestead laws.

SALT INDUSTRY IN 1907.

United States Produced Bulk of Commercial Product.

The United States not only produced 96 1/2 per cent of the salt consumed within its borders in 1907, but exported nearly 62,000,000 pounds valued at more than a quarter of a million dollars, according to W. C. Phalen, whose report on the salt and bromide industry of this country for the last calendar year has just been published by the United States Geological Survey as an advance chapter from its annual volume on the country's mineral resources.

The salt production of the United States in 1907 amounted to 29,704,128 barrels of 280 pounds, valued at $7,439,578—an increase of 531,748 barrels in quantity and of $781,201 in value over the output in 1906.

Expressed on a tonnage basis, these quantities represent an output of 4,158,578 short tons in 1907, or 214,445 short tons in excess of the production in 1906.

The average net value of the product in 1907 was 25.946 cents per barrel, or $1.79 per short ton, as against 23.634 cents per barrel, or $1.69 per ton in 1906, an increase for 1907 of 1.412 cents per barrel, or 10 cent per ton.

Sherman Notification.

Utica, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Preparations are going forward for a great celebration her next Tuesday, when James S. Sherman will be formally notified of his selection as republican vice-presidential candidate. The town will be decorated in an elaborate manner and thousands of visitors are expected. Senator Burrows will make the notification speech. Mr. Sherman is now at work on his speech of acceptance.

The grandmothers of the old Dutch Dunkard families of western Pennsylvania have made and used "Hickory Bark Cough Remedy" and reared their families on it for a hundred years. Now you can buy it of your dealers. Ask for it and use it, because it is pure; because it is the best cough remedy made today. Try it. For sale by any druggist and all dealers everywhere. ### Canadian Wheat Crop.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 14.—One hundred million bushels is a conservative estimate of this year's wheat crop in western Canada. In many sections of Manitoba and other provinces considerable difficulty has been experienced in securing sufficient harvest hands, and in some places the jails have been opened and prisoners serving terms for minor offenses released, on condition that they aid in gathering the bumper crop.

ITALIAN LOVER'S QUEER REVENGE

TORE FAITHLESS SWEET-HEART'S TONGUE OUT.

Dago Dentist Returns from New York to Native Land, When He Hears Girl Had Wedded Another Man, and Takes Horrible Means of Getting Revenge.

Rome, Aug. 14.—For tearing out his former sweetheart's tongue because she had broken her promise to remain faithful while he earned enough to support her, a traveling dentist named Francesco Vergani has been dragged to death by a horse to which he was tied by the by-standers who witnessed his vengeance.

Vergani, when a youth of 13, fell in love several years ago with Eloise Ferrari, a girl a year his junior and the daughter of a prosperous farmer of Revigo province. The girl liked him, but the parents objected that he was too young and too poor to wed. Hoping to make a fortune in America, the young man took passage to New York, after making his sweetheart promise to accept no husband until he returned to claim her.

The two took their vows of faithfulness in the village church, repeating together as they concluded, "May I be stricken dumb if I violate the oath I have taken."

Fortune was slower in coming to him in America than Vergani had hoped, and it was eight years before he considered himself able to support the woman of his choice in the fashion in which he thought she was entitled.

He had found employment in the meantime with an itinerant dentist, who, taking a fancy to the young Italian, finally made him his partner, equipped him with a smattering of dentistry and enabled to accumulate enough to make him in Italy, a comparatively rich man.

Corresponding through a mutual friend, Vergani had heard regularly from his betrothed during the first six years of his exile. Then the letters suddenly ceased. The young man was worried and anxious but still confident that the girl remained true to him.

Just as he was preparing to return home, however, he learned, a month in Boston, that she had married a well-to-do miller in her native village.

His love turned to hatred, Vergani hastened at once to Italy, bought one of the stage coaches from which itinerant dentistry is practiced in that country and drove to Momeccio, a village near Padua, where he arrived during fair time, gathered a crowd and performed a number of small operations, meanwhile questioning his patrons regarding his former sweetheart.

As he expected, it was not long before she and her husband appeared in the group about his booth. Himself unrecognizable in a long beard he wore, he beckoned to the woman, who encouraged by her husband, agreed to a trial of a powder with which he had been polishing the teeth of several of the villagers.

Catching up a pair of forceps as she opened her lips, he seized and tore out a large part of her tongue, while the crowd looked on, frozen with horror. Then as the agonized husband dashed forward and caught his fainting wife in his arms a rush was made for the coach. The crowd's first instinct was plainly to tear him to pieces. As they tore him from the coach, however, some one shouted, "Tie him to a horse and let it drag him."

The suggestion met with instant approval. One of the horses was unfastened from the coach. Vergani was bound to its tail, and the animal, already frightened and rearing, was lashed into a gallop. The victim of the mob's vengeance was dragged nearly two miles before the runaway animal was stopped. Vergani was then almost beyond recognition. The object of his vengeance will probably not recover.

Electricity for La Grande.

To avoid the experience of last winter and spring when La Grande found itself for several weeks in total darkness on account of lack of power to furnish light, the Grand Ronde Electric company, with power stations at Coyé and Union, has entered into a contract with the Baker Light and Power company to furnish the former 200 horse power from the latter's Rock creek power station and to make connections, the Grand Ronde Electric company is to string poles and wires from Union via Pyle's canyon and North Powder, says the Baker City Democrat.

By a recent contract entered into by the Baker Light and Power company and the Fremont Power company, with station at Olive lake, the former secures 300 minimum up to 3000 maximum horse power, enabling the Baker Light and Power company to furnish all the power needed at home and for outside purposes, making it one of the strongest electrical power services in Oregon.

The smallest newspaper published in the United States, says the Minneapolis Tribune Hustler, is the News Letter of Townsend, Del. It is a four-page newspaper two inches wide by three inches long, and is edited and published by W. P. Wilson, who claims it is the smallest in the world. A copy of the paper contains eight personal items and eight lines of general news, a regular title page heading and editorial masthead and a back page devoted to advertising.
