CAMPAIGN OPENS IN DEAD EARNEST

REPUBLICAN HEADQUARTERS WILL BE AT CHICAGO.

Presidential and Congressional Committees Will Open Offices and the Active Work of the Campaign Will Begin—Expenses Are to be Limited and High Salaried Speeches Will Not Drain the Resources.

Chicago, Aug. 31.—Preparations were completed today for the opening of republican national headquarters here. The offices of the committee are in the Auditorium hotel, Chicago's principal hostelry. The campaign for making the next congress republican in its political complexion will be directed from this city.

The campaign of the republicans, both presidential and congressional, will soon be in full swing throughout the west. The western literary bureau, in charge of Victor Rosewater, publisher of the Omaha Bee, is now sending out literature and if sufficient funds can be secured, the western country will be plastered with republican arguments in the shape of leaflets and pamphlets.

It is admitted that the campaign managers will have hard work to hold several western states in the republican column. Conditions in Minnesota and Indiana, especially, are causing the republicans considerable worry. While the managers declare they will carry both states for Taft, they do not minimize the necessity for hard work.

Methods of raising money for campaign purposes are still a source of worry to the campaign managers. Speaking of the cost of conducting the campaign, a prominent republican today said that $400,000 to $500,000 would be needed to defray the traveling expenses of speakers, and that it would cost at least $200,000 to put one piece of literature in the hands of every voter.

He fixed the cost of campaign buttons at more than $75,000, and said that other large sums would be needed for the expenses of headquarters, lithographs and advertising. Then, there are other matters that will be costly.

Where all this money is to come from, now that the corporations are excluded from making campaign contributions, is a matter of conjecture. It is likely that the original estimates will have to be greatly reduced. No speakers who demand large pay for their services will be hired and the campaign in other lines will have to be conducted on the most economical basis possible, in order to make both ends meet.

WALLOWA RANCHER WILL NOT BLOCK O. R. & N.

The threatened delay of the railroad by Hector McDonald and possibly other landowners between Wallowa and the canyon, asking damages or more money for right of way across their land, is reported as having been adjusted, and that McDonald and the other owners would make no further move to restrain the laying of the track, says the Enterprise News-Record.

The hint of trouble from this cause created no little excitement in Wallowa Tuesday and Wednesday. There were broad insinuations of a scheme behind the move, such as stopping the road at Wallowa for the winter, or the location of a new townsite near the head of the canyon.

If there is anything in the matter other than appears on the surface, the citizens of Wallowa are in ignorance of it, for they were indignant and alarmed at the prospect of construction work being stopped entirely.

There was danger of that it is believed, for the officers in charge of the work said the O. R. & N. would not force the railroad on this county when such actions indicated the people did not desire the road.

FAST MOTOR BOAT FOR UPPER RIVER.

For passenger, mail and express service between Kennewick and Richland the fastest boat on the Pacific coast has been secured and will be put in commission on the Columbia river within the next two weeks, says the Kennewick Reporter. Such is the announcement of Howard Amon of the Benson Water company who returned from the sound yesterday. The "Tillicum," a motor boat of 60 horse power, was purchased this week by the Benson Water company and is to be delivered in Kennewick some time next week. With the immense business that will be created by the construction of the Grossecup canal and the consequent influx of people, together with the promotion work being done by the Benson water company operating a canal in Richland at the present time, it is evident that fast transportation will be a necessity and the progressive owners of the townsite of Richland and the surrounding country have provided the boat for the accommodation of the traffic.

In addition to the motor boat the Benson Water company has ordered a handsome White Steamer automobile which will also do duty between Kennewick and our neighbor a few miles up the river.

HERMISTON HERALD URGES FAIR EXHIBIT

It is scarcely more than a month before the third annual exhibition is held of the Third Eastern Oregon District Agricultural society at Pendleton, says the Hermiston Herald. Greater preparations are being made in this part of the state than ever before and especially interested are the many farmers and fruit raisers of the west end of Umatilla county.

Echo and Irrigon are gathering their best products together and placing it in cold storage, and it is an excellent exhibit that both enterprising towns promise to have.

It is up to Hermiston to fall in line and prove to a questioning public that horticultural and agricultural products have actually matured on this heretofore sage brush waste.

There is scarcely a settler on the project who has not one or more varieties of growth to show and if each would become sufficiently interested we could make an exhibit that would be very creditable for a valley so recently put under cultivation.

If you have anything to offer or know of some one who has, notify the Herald office and disposition will be made of it.

Shipped 1000 Head of Cattle.

One of the biggest shipments of cattle going out of Baker City for some time went over the O. R. & N. yesterday for Portland. There were 1,000 head and they were brought in from the Wendt ranches on Burnt river at Bridgeport. Mr. Thomas, representing a Portland meat company, was the purchaser.

ANNIVERSARY OF SPOKANE PLAINS FIGHT

The fiftieth anniversary of the battle of "Spokane Plains," the last notable battle between the Indians and the federal troops, which occurred in the vicinity of this city on the 5th of September, 1858, may be observed by some of the historical organizations of this city next month, says the Spokane Chronicle.

From observations taken by the federal troops at the time of the conflict the battle occurred on the plain west of the city, about where the Hazlewood ranch is now located. The fighting started just north of the north end of Silver lake, and as the troops were traveling north, there was a running fight nearly to Fort George Wright. The Indians set fire to the grass and at one time the wagon train was seriously menaced.

Brigadier General Geo. B. Dandy, retired, who was at that time a lieutenant of artillery, is a living authority for the statement that the corral and quartermaster's stores were located on the flat just opposite the north end of the foot bridge leading from Natarium park to the Fort Wright reservation. The troops camped on the upper bench.

The expedition remained there all day September 5, with Indian scouts on the east side of the river, where the homes of Sherwood, Schermerhorn, Sonnemann and others are now located, but they made no attempt to renew the fighting.

Powwow in Spokane.
On the morning of September 7 Wright broke camp, marching up the west side of the river, crossing the mouth of Hangman creek, up through Peaceful valley, through the gully where the Terminal building now stands, and came up to the level of the falls.

About noon of that day Wright had a conference with the Spokane Chiefs Garry and Pohlatkin, somewhere about the location of the present Olive street bridge, at which conference Wright laid down his ultimatum, telling the Indians that he did not come to make peace but to fight.

"I have whipped you in two bloody battles. Now if you want peace you must come to me with all your women and children and lay them at my feet," he declared.

When the United States government after the treaties with the different tribes negotiated by Governor Isaac I. Stevens, dallied in confirmation, the Indians of the Walla Walla and Yakima valleys became restive, as they saw the white settlers pouring through the Whitman pass of the Rockies. The sulking of Kamiashkin of the Yakimas and of Yellow Serpent of the Walla Walla valley are well known.

In the fall of 1857, a swoop was made upon Fort Walla Walla by the Palouse Indians, and not only government property was stolen, but the stock of settlers in the disputed territory was taken. Major E. J. Steptoe of the ninth infantry, early in 1858 recommended a peaceful expedition to learn the situation with the Spokanes, Coeur d'Alenes and Pend Oreilles.

He found out near Rosalia, where he lost a number of privates and two commissioned officers killed, many wounded and the entire column escaped only by the superior Indian-fighting qualities of the Nez Perce Timothy.

Too Many Offices.

Bend people have circulated petitions all over the county asking that the office of roadmaster be abolished, says the Prineville Review. They argue that the official's salary, $1200, could be better expended by supervisors over contractors than to employ roadmasters, supervisors and contractors. There have been many good roads built since the roadmaster took charge of the office, but the work was in every instance let to contractors who constructed them under his supervision. The standard for roads has been set now and doubtless would be followed by the contractor without the roadmaster. The petition will be presented to the county court, which body will consider it.

Veterinarians for the Islands.

The war department has received from Manila a request for 16 veterinarians surgeons for duty in the Philippines. The Philippine government has recently been making efforts to stamp out diseases of the horses and the caribou in the islands. At no previous time has such a large number of veterinarians been called for at one time. The Philippines assembly recently voted a large sum for this purpose, and as the civil service commission recently certified a long list of names for these places prompt response will be made to the requisition.
