

OREGON'S WHEAT EXPORTATIONS ARE DOUBLED

Twice the quantity of wheat will be sent abroad from Portland this season as last, despite the curtailed production as compared with 12 months ago. Moreover, three-fourths of the grain produced in the Pacific northwest for export purposes will be forwarded from Portland, says the Portland Telegram.

With the increased transportation facilities from the interior to this port, the exporters say there is no longer any excuse for making shipments from Puget sound.

"All the wheat I export this season will be sent from Portland," said T. B. Wilcox, one of the leading grain shippers on the Pacific coast, this morning. "There is no longer any necessity of taking grain from the interior of Oregon and Washington to Puget sound ports. The increased railroad facilities to Portland mean that the cereal will be brought here for shipment."

Mr. Wilcox explained that he will be obliged to export some from Seattle and Tacoma as heretofore, because of the regular steamship service from there to the Orient. The mills of Western Washington will also have to be kept in operation, as they represent heavy investments. But the unground cereal's outlet to the markets of the world will be through the Oregon metropolises.

That Kerr, Gifford & Co., other heavy exporters, are planning to ship all their wheat from Portland this year is indicated by the tonnage they have already sent here. A few days ago the firm chartered the British steamship Queen Amelia to load wheat at Tacoma for Europe.

After being sent to the sound and no grain being found at the docks for her, the steamer was ordered to proceed to Portland. She will arrive in a few days and will take out a cargo measuring close to 200,000 bushels.

There is not a grain carrier being loaded on the sound while three vessels of more than average capacity are being supplied with cargoes at the local docks. Two of them are big tramp steamships whose cargoes will aggregate half a million bushels of wheat. The third is the British bark Andorina, the largest windjammer that ever came up the river. She is capable of handling close to 200,000 bushels of the cereal.

Other ships under charter to transport wheat from Portland in September are nearing the river. But notwithstanding this fact, more tonnage is being brought here from Puget Sound, where not a ship is being loaded with wheat for a foreign port. The exporters say the reason for it is plain: Grain will not be sent from the inland empire over the mountains to tidewater when it can be rolled down hill into Portland, the logical shipping center of the Pacific northwest.

With the wheat export traffic thrown to Portland, this city will take second place among the great grain-shipping centers in the United States. At the close of the fiscal year, June 30, 1909, it is admitted that New York will be the only port in the country having a greater volume of business to its credit. Portland already enjoys the distinction of being the third port in this respect.

Though they make chronic complaints against it occasionally, the owners would rather send their ships to Portland than to any other port on the Pacific coast. Fresh water is an attraction they can hardly resist. Besides, it is pointed out that the charges here as compared with other ports are less, if summed up impartially and including every item.

DOWNWARD COURSE.

Fast Being Realized by Pendleton People.

A little backache at first. Daily increasing till the back is lame and weak.

Urinary disorders quickly follow; Diabets and finally Bright's disease.

This is the downward course of kidney ills.

Don't take this course.

Mrs. Laura McClure, living at 1313 Madison avenue, La Grande, Ore., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for three or four years and the best possible results have always been obtained. An overexertion or the contraction of a cold often served to bring on backache and at such times my kidneys would be weak and I would be greatly annoyed by dizzy spells. I would be restless and nervous and as a result of the loss of sleep, would arise in the morning feeling tired and worn out. Learning of the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a box, took them according to directions and they relieved me at once. I have kept them in the house since as I have the greatest confidence in them. When I feel any of the attacks coming on I immediately resort to Doan's Kidney Pills and they never fail to give the desired results."

MALHEUR WOULD IRRIGATE NOW

RECLAMATION SERVICE IS ASKED TO AID

Six Years Ago the Government Wanted to Help Reclaim the Arid Land of Malheur But the Offer Was Scorned—Now the People Will Accept the Services of the Government.

Farmers and stockmen of the Malheur and Owyhee valleys, in the eastern portion of the state, who refused to allow the government to irrigate their lands six years ago, have now changed their minds and are about to petition the reclamation service for assistance, says a Portland paper.

W. H. Doolittle of Ontario, who is president of the Commercial club of this city, is in Portland to enlist the good offices of the Portland Commercial club as a prelude to calling a mass meeting of the citizens of Malheur county, on behalf of the government system of reclamation.

"Six years ago, when we were approached by the government engineers and told that we would have to give up our local systems of irrigation, to be absorbed in the general system, we could see no justice in it." Mr. Doolittle said this morning, "but when the government withdrew and crossed the Snake river to develop the lands of people willing to meet it half way, we begin to see our mistake.

Since that time some 350,000 acres of western Idaho have been transformed from a sandy desert to green fields and we now realize what we missed. If the reclamation service will reconsider the matter and go ahead with its system in the Malheur and Owyhee valleys, we will show our good will by cooperating to the utmost of our power.

"It did look hard, six years ago, for the man who had developed a little irrigating system of his own to give it up, after years of labor and expense, and this is why we refused. We are wise now, however, as we have seen what President Roosevelt had in mind for us, and the great development included in the government system.

"We have about 150,000 acres that can be brought into the government system and the reservoir sites selected by the engineers at that time will now be placed at the disposal of the reclamation service, provided the government will reconsider as we have done."

Malheur county is the most easterly of Oregon's counties, and is directly tributary to Portland as regards its products and its consumption of merchandise. The people there feel as though the business men of the city will heartily cooperate with them.

The naturally fertile valleys they say must languish in a degree for want of an extensive system of irrigation, which when once in operation will cause Malheur to blossom as the rose and enable the county to support in comfort and luxury a dense population within a short term of years.

WOOL STORAGE BENEFITS ARE NOT UNDERSTOOD

"Wyoming wool growers haven't even begun to appreciate the advantages certain to accrue from the wool storage movement inaugurated by the state association this year," said J. A. Delfelder during his visit to Frontier, to the Cheyenne Tribune.

"We have already demonstrated the fact that this movement was directly responsible for a more active market and considerably higher wool market this year, and made the wool growers who had not sold or consigned a lot more money. Another year will witness much more far-reaching results.

"Very few western wool growers know anything about how to breed for wool. They go about it in a haphazard way, let the wool be what it will, jumble it all together and then kick if the price is low.

"One result of the wool storage and wool market plan will be the grading of all western wool and the education of sheepmen in the essentials for a good clip. Until we educate a sufficient number of expert graders, western wool will be graded at the storage warehouses, but later on we are sure to adopt the Australian plan of grading at the shearing pens.

"Then, and not till then, will the grower know just what he is doing and receive the real value of his product. As it is done now, all kinds of wool are placed in one sack—fine, medium and coarse—and it is in no shape for sale. The carpet manufacturer wants all coarse wool, the dress goods manufacturer all fine, and until these have been sorted out, sales must be made to some one willing to do this for a profit, and not to the manufacturer.

"This storage movement contemplates this feature, and this must ultimately result in attending the grading of all western wools at the shearing pens."

GOOD HOP BUSINESS IN DRY STATE OF OREGON

As another evidence of Salem's prominence as the principal hop center for Oregon and Pacific coast hops and its advantage over other points for hop dealers, another agency has been established in the city for an English firm of merchants, that of The Horst company of London, and it will be in charge of Harry E. V. Bolam, who came directly from the main office in London to look after the firm's interests in this state, says the Salem Statesman.

Mr. Bolam is a young English gentleman of pleasing appearance and personality and comes especially well equipped with knowledge of the hop business, and especially the demands of English brewers, to look after his firm's interests in Oregon, whose hop product is especially sought after by the English trade.

The Horst company, headed by Lonie Horst, is also interested in the American Hop and Barley company, with its principal office in New York, but raises the most of the hops for its own consumption in California.

The Tallest Chimney.

The tallest chimney in the world is now under construction at the Great Falls, Mont., smelter of the Amalgamated Copper company. It has a foundation 74 feet in diameter and 54 foot diameter top. Connections with the furnaces will be made by a flue 20 feet high, 48 feet wide, and 1800 feet long. The tallest chimney hitherto built is that of the Halsbrucker Hütte, near Freiberg, Germany, 469 feet high.

HAS RETURNED FROM ENGLAND

BISHOP SCADDING GLAD HE IS IN OREGON.

Episcopal Bishop Returns From World-Church Meeting in London—Preached on Oregon to 400 Immigrants on Shipboard—Oregon the Best Spot.

The Right Rev. Charles Scadding, bishop of Oregon, and Mrs. Scadding, returned to their home in Portland yesterday, says the Oregon Daily Journal. The bishop went to England to attend the Pan-Angelican congress in June, and the Lambeth conference in July of bishops of the Angelican communion from all parts of the world. The Lambeth conference meets once in 10 years at Lambeth palace, the London residence of the archbishop of Canterbury. This year 143 bishops were present, of whom 60 were American bishops of the Episcopal church. Bishop Scadding said:

"I am very glad to be home again, and have had a very pleasant trip, and the privilege of attending inspiring and instructive conferences which took into consideration various questions affecting the welfare of God's people and the work of the Church of Christ in divers parts of the world. The debates on all questions were far-reaching, and the bishops realized that the links which bind the Episcopal church to the historic past are not fetters upon the free and enterprising spirit which is essential to progress. The sectarian spirit was distinctly absent, and the predominant thought in the minds of the bishops was of the church as ordained of God for the service of mankind."

The subjects under discussion were: "The Reunion of Christendom," "Organization in the Angelican Communion," "The Moral Witness of the Church to the Problems of the Day," "Ministeries of Healing," "Religion, Education," "Supply and Training of the Clergy," "Foreign Missions," "The Faith and Modern Thought," "Marriage Problems," etc. On all these subjects after full and lengthy debate, resolutions were passed, which will be printed and published in due time, and will be well worth reading by every thoughtful person.

The sessions of the conference were held daily from 10:30 a. m. till 5 p. m. with an hour for luncheon, provided by the archbishop and served daily in the palace dining hall.

Bishop Scadding spoke highly of the hospitality and courtesy shown, all the American delegates by the English people, from the king, and prince of Wales to the humblest subject in the realm. He met many people who had relatives in Oregon, and all were interested in knowing about Oregon.

The bishop preached many times in England, and on the steamers, and on the return voyage gave an address to 400 immigrants on board of the Empress of Ireland.

Three young clergymen, graduates of Harvard university, and the Cambridge Divinity school have offered themselves for service in Oregon, and will come early in September.
