YAKIMA FRUIT CROP

PEARS 120 CARS, PEACHES 250 AND APPLES 1600

The Quality of All Fruits Promises to Be Good, As Growers Have Sprayed Thoroughly -- Probable Prices.

Seattle, Sept. 3.—The attention of the fruit dealers in this market is now centered on the eastern Washington fruit crop. Receipts thus far have been light. Receipts for 10 days have not been heavy enough to meet the requirements of the trade, except of apples, which are very plentiful.

The first complete estimate of all kinds of fruit that will be produced in the Yakima valley this year has just been made by H. M. Gilbert, president and manager of the Richey & Gilbert Co. of Toppenish, which handles large quantities of Yakima produce. This estimate has been prepared especially for The Packer and is as follows:

"The Yakima valley has a splendid crop of Bartlett pears, which are now being packed rapidly and are moving to the east. There will probably be 120 cars. Many of the pears, however, will be shipped in mixed cars with peaches, plums, apples, cantaloupes and watermelons.

"The general range of prices will be much lower than last season and fruits of all kinds will find their way into the homes of all classes. With lower prices, of course, consumption will be greatly increased.

"The crop of peaches is short on some of the lower lands on account of the frost and damage from aphids, but owing to the increased acreage of new orchards the output of peaches this season will be something of an increase over last season. Present estimates indicate the output of peaches will be about 250 cars. Owing to the new rules for grading and packing adopted by the shippers' association the grade of Yakima peaches the coming season will be very much higher than in past years. No peaches smaller than 90 to the box will be handled by responsible dealers and growers. Other sections ordinarily pack peaches running as high as 120 to the box. These small sizes are almost invariably poor in flavor. Dealers everywhere are anxiously awaiting the arrival of Yakima peaches. From now on I prophesy Yakima peaches will be known as the best brand of peaches grown in the northwest.

Early Crawfords and Champions are just beginning to come in, together with some Fosters. The great majority of our peaches, however, are of the unexcelled Elberta variety, which will ripen from August 20 in the warmer valleys near Toppenish to September 15 in the Nob Hill district near North Yakima.

"During the last week of August and the first 10 days of September, from present indications, the Yakima valley will be loading from 10 to 35 cars of peaches per day. This will be the season for the housewives to get their canning peaches.

"Apples, of course, are the big end of the fruit crop in the Yakima valley, full two-thirds of the 2500 cars of fruit this season being fall and winter apples. The apples here this year are entirely free from worms, scale and any disease. The fruit growers have made large money in the past few years and given careful attention to spraying, spraying thoroughly in the winter with Rex lime and sulphur spray, and spraying thoroughly just as the bloom is falling with arsenate of lead for the codlin moth. Gravenstein apples are now being picked and shipped to Alaska and points in British Columbia.

"Growers and dealers are not looking for the extravagantly high prices of last year. They are expecting from $1.25 to $1.50 for fancy export varieties and 60 cents to $1 for medium varieties, such as Black Twig, Rome Beauty, Wagner, etc. Jonathans will be ready for shipment the last of September and are going to show, from present indications, elegant color and quality. All varieties are a full crop and the estimated shipments of apples will be 1600 cars of 600 boxes each."

LECTURE COURSE FOR OREGON GRANGE

"Always something new out of Oregon." This new application of the ancient saying is becoming almost as well known as its forbear of antiquity. The latest unique innovation to be promulgated by the Beaver state is the adoption of a lecture course by the Oregon grange combining the work of half a dozen educational institutions of the state.

The plan to educate the people of the state to the benefits to be derived from the Oregon library commission was evolved by J. J. Johnson, state lecturer of the grange. Mr. Johnson in outlining his idea thought it would be of great benefit to educational circles in the farming communities if he could include in his scheme matters of general interest as well as those strictly pertaining to grange work. So he conferred with State Superintendent of Schools J. H. Ackerman, Miss Cornelia Marvin, secretary of the state library commission; President Kerr of O. A. C., Dr. Withycombe of the state experimental station; Miss Isom of the Portland library; Miss Nelly Fox of the county library and others before putting his plans into operation.

The result of the conference is that the farmers of Oregon granges will have at their disposal during the next year the most complete line of educational essays ever got together by an organization of the kind.

There are 122 granges in the state. Each grange has four district lecturers and to every one of these will be mailed a skeleton essay with literature from which to piece it together at the beginning of each month. The work providing topics for discussion and the material from which the different grange lecturers are to construct their essays for delivery to the people will devolve upon Miss Marvin, who will be the busiest woman in the state until vacation time rolls around. In all she will have 488 of these skeleton essays to compile and arrange. The cost to the grange is nothing but the postage on paper.

There are 16 programs to be studied. Each program has four subjects.

The first month these will be sent to the districts whose numbers correspond to the numbers of the programs. The second month and each succeeding month a shift has been devised by which the papers that went to district No. 10 the first month will go to No. 9 the second month and so on, in this way each bundle of essays will have reached every separate grange in the state before the end of the year.

For a Leper Home.
 Washington, Sept. 3.—The recent agitation in Washington over the Early leprosy case and in Arizona over the case of Mrs. General Wardwell, who was similarly afflicted, will, it is believed by officials of the public health and marine hospital service, lead to a renewed effort to obtain the establishment at some place in the United States of a national leprosy for the isolation and treatment of leprosy.

An effort to obtain legislation looking to this end, which was supported by many members of the medical fraternity throughout the country, was made by the public health and marine service in 1905 and a bill providing for such an institution received favorable reports in both houses of congress. It failed of passage largely because of objections from localities in which it was contemplated the leprosy should be located. The bill did not name any state or territory, but simply provided that some abandoned military or naval reservation should be used. It was understood, however, that the authorities had New Mexico in mind as the most desirable location and the delegate from that territory was not slow in making known the opposition of his constituents to such a move.

FRENCH CRIMINALS ESCAPE PENALTY

It has been the practice for some years in France to commute the death penalty by the exercise in all instances of the prerogative of pardon by the president of the republic, says a Paris item. Coincidentally with the period during which executive clemency has been applied invariably there has been an alarming increase of crimes against the person. For example the charges of murder have arisen from 163 in 1901 to 274 in 1905, and the increase was especially marked in the last two years of the five named.

Cases of manslaughter also had become more numerous by nearly 70 per cent between 1904 and 1905. So far as can be judged in the absence of official statistics there has been no falling off in the number of murders and murderous assaults since 1905.

Under the circumstances it is difficult for French citizens not to connect in the relation of cause and effect the cessation of executions for murder and the multiplication of aggravated murders. Juries have repeatedly recorded their conviction that the death many Councils-General and Arrondissement councils have also declared that decisions in capital cases ought not to be overridden by the persistent use of the prerogative of mercy.

There seems to be no doubt, however, that so long as M. Fallieres remains president of the republic he will continue to pardon every person sentenced to capital punishment.

What then, is to be done? To deprive the chief magistrate of that prerogative would require an amendment of the constitution of 1875, and for that purpose the two chambers would have to be called together in joint session at Versailles.

It would be possible, however, by a mere ordinary law to modify what seems to be the dangerous result of the systematic exercise of clemency. The chambers might pass a law providing that in every case where a death penalty should be commuted the convict should be condemned for life to solitary confinement. Experience has shown that, considered as a deterrent the dread of such a punishment is scarcely less effective than is the fear of death. As for the objection to the infliction of the death penalty that it is demoralizing and brutalizing to the witnesses, this easily may be met by providing that in future executions shall take place in private. The French senate has already passed a bill to that effect, and there is ground for believing that the chamber of deputies would ratify the measure.

Surgeon Assassinated.

Omaha, Sept. 3.—Dr. Frederick T. Ruslin, one of the most famous surgeons of the west, was shot and killed as he was on the point of entering his home this morning at 3 o'clock. There is not a single clue to the murderer.

Dr. Ruslin had remained out late for the election returns. His wife was awakened by the pistol shot and rushed downstairs and out on the porch. Dr. Ruslin was sitting in a chair.

"I have been shot," he said, and then lapsed into unconsciousness. He died half an hour later, without regaining consciousness. A single pistol ball had entered the abdomen. The first theory of the police was that Ruslin had committed suicide, but as no pistol had been found, and from the fact that a surgeon would have shot himself through the heart or brain, the murder theory is now accepted. The police are working in the dark and have no clues.

Duster Saved Him.

Portland, Sept. 3.—R. W. Watson, proprietor of the McMinnville-Tillamook auto stage line, nearly lost his life last week by being precipitated into Trask river from the high bridge which spans the river near Tillamook. It was due to Andy Nolan, a Tillamook real estate agent, that Watson's life was saved. Nolan grabbed Watson by his linen duster just as he fell from the bridge and held bravely on to the 210-pound man as he hung, suspended like a human vane, until help arrived. Watson was in his automobile with a party of friends when they met a buggy. The horse backed completely off the bridge, but the buggy was caught and prevented from falling by the timbers of a new bridge being constructed alongside the old one. In assisting the rig to rights Watson slipped and would have been dashed to the river, 40 feet below, had it not been for the quick action of Nolan.

B. A. GIFFORD TO FURNISH PICTURES FOR NEW BOOK

Portland, Sept. 3.—The most elaborate book ever published is in progress of preparation by a firm whose books on other sections of America are in a class by themselves. They have enlisted the services of Benjamin A. Gifford of The Dalles, in securing hundreds of choicest views for their use. Mr. Gifford's collection of Columbia river photographs which adorn the convention hall of the Portland Commercial club, has been responsible for many tourists taking this trip up the Columbia to The Dalles.
