RAILROADS WILL HELP GOVERNMENT

Washington, Sept. 28.—Director George Otis Smith, of the United States Geological survey, has invited officers of the leading railroads of the country to a conference on a co-operative plan by which it is expected the railroads will be able to save thousands of dollars a year. The plan also contemplates most effective assistance to the Government on the part of railroads. The time and place of the proposed conference is to be agreed on later.

The scheme, which has already been approved by a number of the engineers of big lines, is one for the gathering of facts as to the amount of water flowing in the rivers of the country under certain conditions and in different periods of the year.

Naturally, the railroads have been chief sufferers from floods in the basins where their tracks lie. They have suffered not only from damage to their own property, but they have been sued by other corporations and private citizens on the ground that their bridges and culverts were the causes of flood damage.

The railroad authorities have felt that many judgments against the the roads might not have been rendered if they had been able to produce authentic figures on floods. But they have not been able to do this. The national conservation commission has been advised of the proposed plan and whatever results come from it will undoubtedly be considered by the commission at its joint meeting with the governors of the states, or their representatives, here next December.

The survey suggests that the railroad companies establish guages on their bridges and culverts and appoint some of their employes to take daily readings. The survey agrees to have its experts make frequent visits to these stations and take actual current meter measurements so that a rating table of each channel will be available.

For many years the survey has been studying the difference in the flow of rivers in various basins in the country. At present it is engaged in putting the information gained by its study into shape for the use of the National Conservation commission, together with other information which it is gathering, especially for the inventory of the country's natural resources that the commission is preparing.

The survey has been unable to extend its observations to many regions where the information would be of vital importance because it lacks funds. The cooperation of the railroads would permit the survey to cover many other regions.

The expense to the railroads under this arrangement would be trifling, the survey authorities say, because the roads could designate men already on their payrolls, such as draw tenders, tank men, or water station engineers to take the daily readings. On the other hand, if the survey could be relieved of the cost of daily supervision of the guages, it would be able to carry on the more technical parts of the undertaking.

The information which the railroads will obtain if this plan is put into operation is of immense value to them.

The survey's figures on floods have always been accepted by the courts as prima facie evidence. If the belief of the railroad authorities is well-founded, their cooperation with the survey enabling it to extend its operations to their fields will result in big savings to them.

The idea of cooperation as to floods originated with the engineering departments of the railroads themselves. Representatives of these departments of a number of roads held a conference with representatives of the survey, in Chicago last June, and at that time the survey agreed to interview the proper railroad authorities concerning a basis of cooperation.

The survey has further suggested to the railroads that they supply it with all information thy may have on hand concerning the character of the various drainage areas above their bridges. Some of the roads have collected, at great expense, a large amount of valuable information, which could be made of high value to all the railroads if it were gathered together and compiled.

This material would also contribute largely to the general study of the water resources of the country which the survey has been carrying out for a number of years and upon which it is particularly busy just now in the compilation of all information along these lines for the use of the National Conservation commission.

BRYAN ANSWERS PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

sumption in our favor that must be over-come before you can ask the people to accept your statement that the law-defying corporations have more to fear from republican success than from a democratic victory.

Make it Bryan Against Taft.

In conclusion you say that you ask support for Mr. Taft because he stands for the moral uplift of the nation, because his deeds have made good his words and because the policies to which he is committed and more than that, if I may assume that he will follow in your footsteps. I dare compare my ideal of the presidency with his. I do not regard it as proper for the president to use his prestige, his influence or his patronage to aid one member of his party as against another who aspires to office and I regard it as a violation of the obligation that the president owes to the whole people to use an office that belongs to the whole people as a party asset for the advancement of a personal friend and a political protege. Believing that the president should not be tempted to use that power for his own advantage, and it is equally repugnant to the spirit of our constitution that he should use it for any one else's advantage, I tried to secure an amendment to the constitution limiting the president to a single term and I have announced three campaigns that if elected I would not be a candidate for renomination. I believe the occupant of so high an office with so enormous power at his command, should be absolutely free to devote himself unselfishly to his country's welfare and I am sanguine enough to believe that if intrusted with power I would be able to make my administration so successful that the members of my party could, without interference from me, select the one most worthy to carry on the work begun by me—so successful that the administration would speak for itself, and that it would not be necessary for me to defend it in bulletins or pronuncamentos. I think I could in this way give to the members of the opposite party, as well as to the members of my own party a "square deal."

Very truly yours,
WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

EVEN THE ARLINGTON CLUB DISCARDS T. M. STEVENS.

T. M. Stevens, an exporter of Portland, the unspeakable wretch who for 16 years lived with a woman whom he introduced into Portland society as his wife, but who he recently discarded, claiming he was never married to her, has just been dropped by the Arlington club of Portland, for his rascality. The Oregon Daily Journal says:

T. M. Stevens, business man, society man, clubman, whose sensational matrimonial tangles have kept Portlang agog for the past few weeks, no longer basks in the pleasant and exclusive warmth of the Arlington club. The portals of that organization no longer open to the touch of his hand. Mr. Stevens is not a member of the Arlington club any more. He has resigned.

When Mr. Stevens sprang into notoriety a little more than a month ago through the charges made against him by Mrs. Powell-Stevens in her suit to enforce the payment of the fund set aside for her in an agreement made between the two, then his associates at the Arlington club began to look askance at him as he visited the place.

Later, when Mr. Stevens made the announcement that he had never been married to the woman who, for the past 16 years has been accepted by Portland society as his wife, the members of the Arlington club looked straight at him, but without warmth of greeting or friendliness of demeanor.

When Mr. Stevens, in defence of what his friends considered propriety, married Lillian Monk and brought her back to Portland, where he established his residence in his old apartments, then there was a revolt, more or less open, among the members of Portland's most exclusive club.

The suggestion was carried to Mr. Stevens, in more or less pointed manner, that it would be well for him to tender his resignation to the board of governors and voluntarily cease to be a member of the Arlington club. Mr. Stevens coincided with the view. It appearing more desirable perhaps to resign voluntarily than to be ejected involuntarily.

And so Mr. Stevens is not now a member of the Arlington club. He has also deserted his former apartments at The Madison, corner of West Park and Madison streets, and has taken his bride to a new location on 23d street, between Glisan and Hoyt, where they are living the simple life apart from clubdom and society's exhaustive demands.

PORTLAND STOCK SHOW IS FINANCIAL FAILURE

Portland, Sept. 28.—Saturday saw the close of the First Pacific National Livestock Show—a huge success but a financial failure.

Although a more splendid exhibit of stock was never seen in Oregon, although record after record was smashed in the racing events at the Country Club park, public enthusiasm over the show was too small to permit profits, and in fact left a deficit of a small sum.

Portland, however, expects to continue the exhibition. Already a plan is on foot whereby through selling season tickets in advance funds will be secured to guarantee the success of the scheme.

The results Saturday were:

2:05 class pacing, 3 in 5, purse $1500.

Mona Wilkes	1	1	1
Leland Onward	2	2	2
Delilah	3	3	3

"Cut prices" in all lines at Goodman Hardware company's. We are retiring from business and no goods reserved during our cut price sale.

THE AMOUNT OF YOUR "BELIEF IN ADVERTISING" WHICH IS PUT INTO TYPE IS WHAT COUNTS.

A business man cannot afford to "miss" news that affects his particular line of business,. Nor can the "buyer" of the supplies for the house and family afford to "miss" news affecting prices of things that have to be bought,.

Bargain-hunting is not, as sometimes supposed, the pursuit of a wild desire to spend money for things not needed. It is the quest of the best opportunities to buy the things that ARE needed,.

Where one woman wastes either time or money because of a bent for "bargain-hunting," 50 women save and conserve both.

It is not well to try to load a ship with cargoes far beyond her cargo capacity. Nor well to try to advertise a big store in a small space.

A fixed purpose to find a certain number of new customers each week is a good sort of advertising ambition for a merchant.
