Cause to Be Thankful

This store has every cause to be thankful for the patronage it has enjoyed since its opening and is extremely thankful for the many expressions of well wishes and good will of its many customers.

While we have worked hard and used all the honorable means to build here a business that should command the support of the entire community, yet we fully realize the bountiful volume of trade we have enjoyed since opening is largely the result of the good will of the general public.

The marvelous success of our beginning fills us with confidence to build here a Bigger, Better Store, aiming to sell here the very best the market affords and in every case at the lowest possible price consistent with honest merchandise.

Better goods for less money in every case
Compliments of the season and good will to all

"RUBBING IT IN."
The Inland Observer of Spokane is responsible for the following:
One of our popular young swains has been going about of late with a certain pained expression that has called forth solicitous inquiries and personal joggings from his various cronies, none of whom appreciated the real seriousness of the situation until the woeful one recently became confidential and the secret was out. He didn't mind so much, he said, being jilted, though he really had liked her awfully well, you know. And he wasn't so much disappointed at the loss of her personally, as he was in discovering her possession of a nasty little spirit that he really hadn't suspected. It seems she wasn't satisfied with throwing him over, but she returned the ring in a parcel marked, "Glass, With Care!" It was more than he had been prepared for.

TRACTION MAN TOLD OF PLANS

city and said the company would take care of the interurban construction. He said the company was not asking any particular sum from Pendleton and also declared that stock subscriptions made by local people would not be payable until after the completion of the company's line within this city.

At the conclusion of Mr. FitzGerald's talk he was asked many questions by local people present and answered the questions in detail. When asked by Judge Fee if the company took the attitude of refusing to build its line in Pendleton unless local people took a certain amount of stock in the company, Mr. FitzGerald replied that the company was not taking such a stand.

Strong Local Ethiasm.
After Mr. FitzGerald had finished local men took up the discussion of the subject and the talk showed a strong local sentiment in favor of the traction company's enterprise. R. Alexander lead off with a brief speech in which he warmly upheld the Washington & Oregon company as a concern that is out to do much for this city and tributary country.

Dr. C. J. Smith also spoke enthusiastically and declared that in his judgment the hope of this city and surrounding country rests more upon electric lines than upon anything else. He believes that other small cities of the northwest owe their present prosperity largely to their electric lines and especially their interurban connections.

It had been previously suggested by Mr. FitzGerald that a committee of local men be named to meet with the traction people and make known the wishes of this city with respect to the company's enterprise. Dr. Smith moved that a committee of seven be named by the chairman to serve in this capacity. The motion was carried unanimously and President Moore at once appointed those named above. Judge James A. Fee then arose and asked that Dr. Smith be made chairman of the committee, but Dr. Smith requested that Judge Fee retain the chairmanship.

Others who spoke upon the subject were Dr. M. S. Kern, Will Moore, Douglas Belts, J. H. Gwinn, T. C. Taylor and others.

Another Meeting Saturday.
Before adjournment it was decided to hold another meeting Saturday evening for the purpose of listening to the report of the committee. The meeting will be held in conjunction with the meeting called to urge the taking up by the government of the West Umatilla project.
