WALL STREETS' REVILER IS STILL DISCOURAGING

Washington.—The robust figure and resonant voice of John Wesley Gaines or "Tennessee, Sah," may no longer grace the chamber of the House of Representatives and animadvert on the iniquities of Wall street, but that same robust figure and resonant voice are by no means lost to the National Capital.

John Wesley, who went out in a blaze of glory when he escorted President Taft—then president-elect—to the Capitol for his inauguration, is resurrected.

Despite the efforts of the democratic voters of the sixth congressional district of Tennessee to shift the limelight from his heroic figure and their success in casting the glory of representing that section upon Hon. Joe Byrns, John Wesley is undismayed. He is back in our midst.

Be it known that John Wesley was one of the few recreations of the last congress. Whenever things got very dull—which was quite often—John Wesley unlimbered his oratorical artillery, advanced his elocutionary cavalry, held his verbal infantry in reserve and began a wordy assault upon Wall street.

From the failure of the tobacco crop to the last storm that swept the Great Lakes—every evil that befell the country John Wesley charged to the iniquitous and abstracted Wall street.

If the debate in the House waxed dry, some bored legislator would turn to John Wesley Gaines, of Tennessee, and implore: "Tell us about Wall street, John." And John would.

John appeared in Washington this year as soon as the congressional session opened, despite the fact that cruel fate and an ungrateful constituency had barred him from lifting his voice in rigorous denunciation of Wall street. He called on President Taft, and on leaving, held a score of newspapermen spellbound with a vituperative discourse on Wall street. He holds forth on the same theme nightly to an audience in the lobby of one of the legislative hotels.

PHILOSOPHIC REFLECTIONS OF THE TRAVELING SALESMAN (By Bob Blake.) Kid gloves and a walking stick are useless to a man driving an ox team. Many a man begins where he ought to finish, and then wonders why he never accomplishes anything.

A college education is a good asset, but practical experience pays better dividends. Small pitchers have large ears, so be careful what you say in the presence of children. It is a fool who flies in airships even though the walking is bad.

The man who always carries a chip on his shoulder generally gets his head knocked off. A "good fellow" is usually the one who dies poor and whose widow discovers that his life insurance policy had been allowed to lapse. If the hotel grub is bad, the wise drummer calls for ham and eggs; if the coffee is poor he hits up the milk; falling which there is always water.

It seems that the idea was to kidnap the Rockefeller and take him to sea, which would give him a fine opportunity to sprinkle oil on the troubled waters.

LIBRARIAN MAKES MONTHLY REPORT

SHOWS INTEREST TO BE ON RAPID INCREASE

Average Daily Circulation During Last Month Has Been 67 Books—118 Books and One Pamphlet Added During Last Month.

The monthly report of Miss Mayme Batterson, librarian of the public library shows that the interest in that institution continues to increase in a very satisfactory manner. The average circulation per day during the past month has been 67 books and this is three times the average circulation at the time the library was first opened in the city hall.

The following is in part the detailed report submitted by Miss Batterson: Registration: 110 residents, 3 non-residents and 2 temporary residents have registered during the month, making a total of 115, for the month. Total registration to date is 823.

Circulation: The circulation of books has increased during the month notwithstanding holiday times. Average daily circulation for the month is 67 books, largest daily circulation, 151. Reading and Reference Room Use: Average number of persons using the library for reading and reference purposes, daily, 17. A great deal of reference work is being done for the High school, especially in connection with the work in debate.

New Books: 118 books and 1 pamphlet have been added during the month. 70 of the books were added by purchase, 9 by gift from local people, and 39 books and 1 pamphlet by gift from the government, being government documents.

Advertising: Nothing has been done in the way of advertising except the table of "Books worth reading." Twenty-five volumes of non-fiction that is really worth reading are kept on the table in front of the loan desk and an effort is made to direct readers attention to them. The books are changed each Saturday morning.

Work Accomplished: The new books were ordered, received, catalogued and put into circulation. Much time has been spent in cleaning, mending and rearranging the books from the old library.

Points to be acted upon: The most urgent need of the library at present is new books.

WILL CONFERENCE LET MICHIGAN PLAY AGAIN

Chicago.—The eyes of the big colleges in the middle west turned today toward the Auditorium hotel in this city, where the football coaches and managers of the conference schools met to settle definitely the intercollegiate turmoil over next season's battles.

It is expected that before the conference adjourns the perplexing question of the University of Michigan games and problems bearing on the continuance of friendly relations in the "big eight" will be definitely decided.

Rumors are in circulation that Michigan games and problems bearing on the continuance of friendly relations in the "big eight" will be definitely decided.

Rumors are in circulation that Michigan will petition for readmission to the "big eight" but it is not generally believed that Michigan will take any such action. In case such action is not taken it will be up to the conference to decide whether Minnesota or any of the other conference schools shall be permitted to contract for games with Michigan next season.

COURT DECISION BRINGS MAN NEARER TO NATURE

Washington.—The mummified egg industry received another jolt and the human race was shoved another notch nearer nature by a court decision just rendered at Peoria, Illinois, the opinion in which today reached the Department of Agriculture. The Illinois judge held against the use of borax as a preservative for eggs, in a case growing out of the seizure of fifty cases of hen fruit preserved in that "dope."

While the decision may bring egg consumers nearer to nature, department officials aren't yet anticipating the time when the housewife can hope to stand expectant at the hen house door awaiting the kaplunk which indicates the production of the egg. Indeed, the department still sorrowfully admits that eggs may yet be messed up, dried and kept many moons ere they appear, grivated and mushroomed, as an inviting omelet on the restaurant table. The pure food law has its defects, they admit. But they intend to stop the practice of egg storage houses in "pickling" hen fruit in poisons.

Man near Hazeldell, Lane county, lately trapped two fat bears and a big wolf. One bear yielded 35 pounds of grease.
