SONGS OF DONEGAL

The big ship lies waitin'
And, manned by all her hands
To hoist the sail to the morn-
in's gale,
And off to foreign lands,
Soon we must say a sad good-
by,
To friends and kindred all,
To the homes we love, and the
hills above,
In dear old Donegal,
In dear old Donegal, in loved
old Donegal,
To the homes we love, and
the hills above,
In dear old Donegal!
Oft through her glens we've wandered
We've roamed along her hills,
When skies were bright
And young hearts light
And wayward was her fill,
But dire misfortune gathered
since,
And to our lot did fall,
'Tis why we go in grief and woe
From dear old Donegal!
From dear old Donegal, from loved old Donegal
'Tis why we go, in grief and
woe,
From dear old Donegal,
Farewell to the heathery mountains,
Farewell to the pleasant vales,
To the flashing rills from the
gray old hills,
That dash a-down the dales,
To the boys so rare, and the
colleens fair,
'Tis fare-yew-well to all,
For God knows when we'll meet
again,
In dear old Donegal,
In dear old Donegal, in loved
old Donegal,
Och! God knows when we'll meet again,
In dear old Donegal!
—New York Evening Post.

A HEART TO HEART TALK.

Today the East Oregonian presents its readers with a two page supplement from the old ladies' business of this city. It is not a mere advertisement, but a full and complete business directory for the ladies of Pendleton. It contains the names and addresses of all the ladies who are engaged in business here, and it is a most valuable reference work for all who are interested in the business of the city.

that prevades the same. The business men of this city have confidence in the future of Pendleton. They know that there are many good things in store for this place. There are forces at work for the material advancement of Pendleton and its tributary country. When the various enterprises now in prospect are gotten underway Pendleton will go forward as it has never done before. This little city will not be merely a good big country town. It will be a commercial and manufacturing center—a real city.

At this time Pendleton's future rests very largely in the hands of its own people. Cities are built, they do not grow. In order to make Pendleton the city it is entitled to be its property owners, bankers, business men, professional men, newspapers and others must have faith, courage and patriotism. Pessimism and business cowardice can do nothing. The people must get together and work hard for the advancement of the city. We must take off our coats as we have done of old and make things come our way. "Where there's a will there's a way." Here's to the "Pendleton spirit," the spirit that has made this place the best and most metropolitan little city in the west and is going to make Pendleton hold its own in the great March of Progress.

THE LADIES ARE HELPING.

In the work of making Pendleton the city it ought to be the ladies may do invaluable work and it so happens that in Pendleton they are rendering most valuable service along this line. But a short time ago the club women of the city took charge of the public library, placed that institution upon a good financial basis and they have kept it there. It is now a real library and is accomplishing much good. The ladies have also established a rest room that is filling a long felt need. They are now busy with raising money for park purposes and if the entertainment that is to be given under their auspices tomorrow night receives the patronage it deserves a considerable sum will be placed to the credit of the city's park fund. Assist the ladies in their good work in behalf of the Better Pendleton.

Charles H. Green says that the price of wool will be high during the coming season and Mr. Green should know. He usually buys a large portion of the eastern Oregon clip. Wool was high last season too and it is very gratifying to know that the prospects are bright for the coming season.

Owing to the absence of lights last evening the G. A. C. reception had to be postponed until this evening. G. A. C. played in hard luck as it has done before. But G. A. C. is always in the game, let the odds be what they may.

For the delay in the issuance of the East Oregonian last evening this paper asks the pardon of its readers. Under the circumstances the delay was unavoidable and by no one was this matter more regretted than by the publishers.

It would not be a bad idea for the halls, theatres and other public places to be supplied with equipment for lighting by means of gas.

"FIGHTING BOB" AN EDITOR.

Rear-Admiral Robley D. Evans, U. S. N., (retired), or "Fighting Bob" as he is better known the world over, after having acquired everlasting fame by his feats during times of war and peace, has decided to forsake activities in his former field and devote his time to the command of that insignificant looking though formidable lever of the world—the editor's pen. In his new field "Fighting Bob" will take up the defense of the navy and its enlisted men through the publication of the Bluejacket, having become president of the Bluejacket company.

Every number of the Bluejacket will have a contribution from the admiral, who has always been a personal favorite as well as a staunch supporter of the enlisted men. The Bluejacket was established in 1901 by Chief Yeoman J. Fred Buehler, of the Newport Training Station. Admiral Evans has had a good deal of experience in newspaper and magazine work, his views on all topics dealing with the navy having been everywhere in demand.—Fourth Estate.

ADVERTISING.

Advertising is both production and distribution. It distributes the merchandise of the world and then produces demand for still more. It both creates wants and supplies them. Advertising is the great builder. It builds businesses; it builds fortunes; it builds homes and communities and cities and nations. But its highest work is in upbuilding humanity. The constitution and the church follow the flag, but both the flag and the missionaries follow business created through advertising. Advertising is the great educator; the great humanizer; the great civilizer; it teaches a better way of living; a better way of furnishing homes; a better way of managing our affairs. It brings communities closer together; it makes friends of enemies and brothers of friends; it binds the world together; it makes the whole world kin.

The civilized world of today is one big business family and advertising is its guide and mentor. "How to live," says Herbert Spencer, "is the vital question," and advertising gives the answer.

"Remember young Chumpleigh?"
"What happened to him?"
"One with $100,000."
"Too bad."
"Not at all. He eloped with it."

City's Great Relief

KNEW WHO WAS GOVERNOR.

While Governor Wilson of Kentucky was housebound last winter, owing to a strained tendon in his leg, he was attended by "Jim" who had been general factotum to many governors, and who was a source of much fun among the state house attaches. The lame leg caused the governor to move his office temporarily to the mansion where he received many delegations. On one occasion Mrs. Wilson had waited luncheon for thirty minutes, and she told his excellency that he must come down and eat with her. "My dear," said Mr. Wilson, "just as soon as I see that delegation of men downstairs, I'll be with you." Mrs.

Wilson was determined, and said: "Jim, you go down and tell them to wait." "Jim," frowned the governor, as that worthy started off to obey the mistress of the mansion—"Jim, you know who is governor, don't you?" "Yas, suh," grinned Jim, with seeming innocence, "yas, suh. I'll go down and tell the gemmen to wait, suh."—Selected.

"She blows all he gives her."
"And he spends all he makes on the side."
"Apparently they are giving blow for blow."
