FOOTBALL STARTED IN CLASS RUSHES

FACTS ON ORIGIN OF GREAT AMERICAN GAME

Old Rugby Players at Harvard Organized First Real Team to Play in 1874—Game Has Undergone Many Changes.

Football at American colleges runs back beyond the memory of the oldest living graduate. But the kind of football that was played back in the '40s was of such a crude character that it would hardly be recognized as the second great American game today, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. In those early days it served more as an excuse for a rush between the sophomores and the freshmen. The football of the early college days gave place to rushes between the classes, which were practically the same as the football game of that day, except that the ball was not used. These rushes, at first governed by no laws or rules, took on a form of organization during the '60s, but a ball was kicked about and more or less amusement derived from it.

In the early '70s, however, a number of Rugby boys at Harvard revived the game and it was taken up in earnest and associations organized at several of the colleges. In 1872 Columbia University played a match game with Yale. There were 20 men on a side and the game was nearer the English association game than the English rugby. The costumes of those days were long trousers and jerseys. The rules were simple and forbade anyone picking up, carrying or throwing the ball. There were no "on" or "off" side rules, and goals were made by sending the ball under the crossbar instead of over it. Fouls were penalized by making the player who had committed the foul toss the ball straight up in the air from the place where the foul occurred, and it was unfair to touch the ball until after it had touched the ground. This particular rule gave rise later to a good deal of skillful drop-kicking, the man kicking the ball just as it touched the ground. Although the game was played with 20 men on a side when a man was disabled instead of sending a substitute a man was dropped from the other side.

It was not until 1874 that football began its present career of interest in American colleges. In that year football clubs were formed in many of the American colleges, each institution having five or six teams which played between teams of different colleges under the American rules and played on old Forbes Field, at Cambridge, Mass., between Harvard and McGill University of Montreal, Canada. This game was played on May 14, 1874, and resulted in a victory for Harvard by three touchdowns against McGill's nothing.

In the same year Harvard played McGill three games, winning two and tying one; Tufts College won and lost a game with Harvard; the University of Canada lost a game to Harvard and on November 13 Yale and Harvard played their first game together, Harvard winning by eight touchdowns.

The football referee in the early days was a very important and dignified person on the field, and always dressed in a frock coat and silk hat.

PRESIDENT OF YALE FAVORS THE OLD GAME

New Haven, Conn.—President Hadley of Yale, upholds football in a statement published here. He says: "Football at Yale during the present season has worked very well. We had a number of sprained ankles, but only two or three cases of more serious injury. I doubt whether this is a worse record than that of baseball."

"At any rate it is a small price to pay for a game which diverts energies of one kind of boys from rowdiness and another kind from drinking. If we want to eliminate mass play, we may do so merely by abolishing all gridiron lines and making one comprehensive rule that the ball changes hands on every down unless the opponents have had a fair and equal chance to get possession of it. This would abolish mass play, root and branch."

"BILL" HAYWARD SAYS RUGBY FOR OREGON

Vancouver B. C.—That the University of Oregon will adopt Rugby football as it is played on this side of the international boundary was announced recently at a football banquet by "Bill" Hayward, coach of the University athletes. Hayward came to Vancouver for the purpose of witnessing the games between the University of California team and Vancouver. He said he was impressed with it and would recommend the adoption of the game.

Coach Schaeffer, of the Californians created a sensation by declaring that his team had been robbed of the second game by Referee J. S. Tait.

"I am not going back to California and make a squeal there," said Schaeffer. "I am going to tell you to your faces that I think we got the worst of it."

KAISER'S DAUGHTER MAY WED ENGLISH PRINCE

London.—Princess Victoria Louise of Germany, the only daughter of the kaiser, has just "come out," and it is said the announcement of her engagement to a popular English prince will shortly follow. High dignitaries both in Great Britain and Germany are confidently of the opinion that such a union will assist largely in removing many of the petty differences and jealousies which so often show themselves in the relations of the two countries. Want of means on the part of the prospective young bridegroom threatened at one time to cause the matter to be dropped, but these difficulties are believed to have been satisfactorily overcome.
