AMERICANS DELVING FOR CAVE TREASURES

London.—The romantic neighborhood of Chestow Castle Monmouthshire, has been the scene recently of a mysterious search, conducted with close secrecy by two American visitors, Dr. Prescott of Boston, and Dr. Owen, of Detroit.
Chestow Castle, a handsome eleventh-century ruin, stands in the summit cliffs washed by the Wye, and these cliffs abound with caves, and in one of the caves, almost hidden under masses of moss and ivy, the Americans and their assistants have for some weeks past been busy with pick and shovel. Their operations aroused much curiosity, but the object of the search was kept secret until the other day when it leaked out that they expected to unearth documents of very great historical interest and importance.
The doctors stayed at a Chestow hotel and breathed no word of their strange quest. Though an invalid, Dr. Owen joined enthusiastically in the search. It is stated that he believes that the cave contains documents which have not seen the light for over 300 years. The cave was searched first to the right, then to the left, then straight on, and afterward downward toward the tide-line of the Wye.

No papers were discovered, and the two doctors have now returned to America, but their hopes are not abandoned, and they have signified their intention to renew the search, and for this purpose are said to have obtained the exclusive right of boring and delving in the caves.

DEATH OF "DUTCH JAKE" MUST REMAIN MYSTERY

Being unable to fix the responsibility for the death of Mike Hoefner, the so-called "wood alcohol victim" the coroner's jury which was empaneled yesterday to investigate the case, brought in their verdict this afternoon. They find that the deceased came to his death as a result of drinking denatured alcohol but they say they were unable to determine whether he administered the stuff himself or whether it was given to him by someone else. Five witnesses were examined.
This will probably end the case so far as the officers are concerned and the mystery surrounding the death of the unfortunate man will probably always remain unsolved.
Every effort to delve into his past or to locate some of his relatives, have failed and he was buried today at the expense of the county. So far as could be ascertained he does not have a living relative.

The Pastime.

The following new pictures for Friday and Saturday:
"Under the Stars and Stripes" (Selig). A story sensational and bubbling over with patriotism and full of heart interest.
"The Usurper" (dramatic). A well told story of a man who impersonated a friend in order to obtain a fortune.
"A Live Corpse" (comedy). It is funny from beginning to end.
"Corsican Hospitality" Open Aid. This film presents a vivid picture of the hot, revengeful nature of the Corsican.
One set Travelogues.
One illustrated song.
"I want to know," cried the irate visitor, "whether that item of yours in regard to me is an intentional slur or merely editorial stupidity?"
"What are you talking about, my dear sir, and who are you?" asked the editor.
"I'm Dr. Killam, and I refer to your announcement of the sudden illness of the Honorable John Jones, in which you say, Mr. Jones is in great danger. Dr. Killam has been called in."

Newsy Notes of Pendleton

For Students of History.
Readers and students of French history may be glad to know that the public library has the third edition of "France Under Richelieu and Mazarin," by J. B. Perkins.

Alaska Miners Here.
Four Alaska miners are registered at the Hotel Bowman today. They are Herman Tofty of Tofty, Alaska, and E. H. Woodcar, Jack Glinven and Fred D. Burke of Fairbanks.

Examinations for Teachers.
The regular February examinations for teachers will be held in this city next week, beginning with Wednesday. The examinations for county papers will last three days while those for state papers will last four days.

Library Ball.
The big ball given by the ladies of the city for the benefit of the free public library, will be held in the Eagle-Woodman hall this evening. No pains have been spared to make this a big affair and all indications point to one of the most successful events of its kind ever held in the city.

Elks Meet in Small Hall.
Because of the fact that the library hall will be held in the regular hall this evening, the meeting of the lodge of Elks will be held in the small lodge room of the Eagles-Woodmen building this evening. The meeting will be called promptly at 7:30 so that all may have time to attend the ball afterwards.

Infant Son Dies.
Word was received here this morning of the death at the family home in Portland, Sunday, of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Roland N. Oliver. Mrs. Oliver was formerly Miss Alice Van Nuys and both are well known here, having moved to Portland only last fall. The child died the day of its birth.

Monster Engine in Collision.
Engine No. 459, one of the new monstrous iron horses which the O. R. & N. company recently installed on the mountain division and which has been attracting considerable attention on each of its trips to Pendleton, was mixed up in a freight wreck at Gibbon station, yesterday. The big engine was pulling into Gibbon station just as a freight train with engine 361 as helper was pulling out toward the east. For some reason the engineer in command of the big engine did not see the one ahead of him and a rear end collision ensued. No one was hurt, the track was soon cleared and the slight damage to the two engines will be repaired without much trouble.

High School is Victor.
By the overwhelming score of 55 to 9 the high school basketball team last evening, defeated the team from the Pendleton Academy on the Commercial club floor. The contest was an undisputed claim to the city championship. With the exception of Captain McDill the lineup for the first half of the game was composed of second team men. The score for this part was 22 to 2 in favor of the high school. Devine did not play during the game. The academy boys showed good spirit but they played out of luck against a greatly superior team though the feature of the game was the absence of teamwork on either side.

DUCAM, AUTHOR NOT POPULAR.

Duke of Argyle Might Produce Something Very Spicy.
London.—Although the Duke of Argyle is a distinguished author and poet, his works have not attained a popular vogue. Some of them have been called "stodgy." Now the friends of the duke say he is about to emulate the example set by the Countess of Cardigan and write something quite spicy. He has been gathering data for this book, the title of which is "Intimate Society Letters of the Eighteenth Century." It will be published in April. As the husband of the king's favorite sister, the Princess Louise, the duke has had a free run of a mass of royal documents. He will have the assistance of the heads of many noble houses, who will furnish him with interesting letters and documents, many of which have not seen the light of publicity.
Some of the most gossip of these letters will throw a lurid light on the intrigues carried on in court circles in the wicked days of George III. There will be a series of letters dealing with the famous trial of Warren Hastings; the intimate correspondence of King George's sister, the Duchess of Brunswick; others from Dr. Moore, the father of General Sir John Moore, to the Duke of Hamilton, and others from Madame de Staël.

If the letters prove as sensational as expected, it will be interesting to note the action taken by the Circulating Libraries association, which refused to distribute Lady Cardigan's memoirs.
The Duchesse of Argyle takes but mild interest in her husband's work.

They Knew the Answer.
"Well, there were only three boys to school today who could answer one question that the teacher asked us," said a proud boy of eight.
"And I hope my boy was one of the three," said the proud mother.
"Well, I was," answered the young hopeful, "and Sam Harris and Harry Stone were the other two."
"I am very glad you proved yourself so good a scholar, my son; it makes your mother proud of you. What question did the teacher ask you, Johnnie?"
"Who broke the glass in the back window?"—Chicago News.

Wealthy Brewer Pays $60,000 for Baronetcy But Doesn't Get It.
London.—Much mystery is thrown about a suit, Wyatt vs. the Countess of Warwick, which was called recently in the King's bench court, over which the Lord Chief Justice presides, and was postponed.
Wyatt is a wealthy brewer with social aspirations. The story goes that about a year ago he was told by a prominent member of the principal Tory club, the Carlton, that if he wished to be made a baronet, he would attain his ambition by paying $100,000. Wyatt satisfied himself that the persons making the proposition could make good and he agreed to pay $100,000 with the understanding that a baronetcy would be given him among the titles and honors which the King conferred on his last birthday.
Some time before the list was to appear, Wyatt was informed by the person who had approached him originally, that he must pay $50,000 to principals in the negotiations, when, it is said, he named as the Countess of Warwick and a high official of Buckingham Palace.
Mr. Wyatt objected to paying such a large sum until the baronetcy was "delivered," but his objections were overcome and he paid it.
But when the list of birthday honors was published, his name was not on it. Naturally Mr. Wyatt was indignant and demanded his $50,000. He was persuaded that the coveted title would be given him when the next list of honors should appear, that it was withheld only because certain necessary formalities had to be gone through with.
Becoming suspicious, Mr. Wyatt made inquiries and learned that his name had not even been suggested to the King. So he brought suit to recover his $50,000.

Attention B. P. O. Elks.
Regular meeting tonight in small lodge room, Eagle-Woodman hall at 7:30, sharp. Balloting for candidates. THOS. FITZ GERALD, Sec.

POEMS OF PRINCESS SHOW BROKEN HEART

Berlin.—The simple and sad life story of an unknown German princess is unfolded in "Dream and Life; Songs of One Who Came to an Early End," a remarkable posthumous volume of poems published anonymously at Munich. Beyond the disclosure of the poems themselves that they are the productions of a royal lady who passed her final days on the Riviera, the mystery of their authorship is profound.
The publishers inform me that her identity has never been veiled from them. The only clue is a stanza indicating that the princess was a Bavarian. The poems are of conspicuously higher accomplishment than the amateurish efforts, occasionally put forth by poetesses of gentle birth, and deserve notice, according to the reviewers, on their merits, quite apart from their romantic and mysterious origin.

The authoress has practically written an autobiography in verse. It begins with poems of her childhood and of a youthful love, which never forsook her, and it relates the martyrdom of a marriage in which her heart had no place, and how her sorrow sent her to an early grave, despite her efforts to find solace in her children and in deeds of mercy.

In aristocratic and literary circles there is keen interest in identifying this gifted princess who died of a broken heart.
