Revival Meeting Last Night.

The interest at the Baptist church last night was good. This was the first week night meeting and everything indicates a shower of blessings in the days to come. Evangelist Ledford sang "Only a Little While." His sermon was full of interest and held the closest attention of the good crowd that had assembled to hear him. His theme was "How we may know we are saved." He answered this question from the word of God and showed that God has given positive evidence to a saved man that he may know it. His illustrations from life were to the point and interesting and often set out the reasonableness of what the Bible says so that one could not help but get the truth presented. If any one is interested in his eternal welfare or if he wants to know what God teaches concerning salvation, he should come to these meetings. They are for every one and all are invited. Song service with several instruments at 7:30 every night. Sermon at 7:45. Day meetings at 10 o'clock each morning. The Bible reading today was on, "What God teaches about how to pray." Christian people and seekers are asked to come to these morning meetings.

U. S. SHEEP AND GOATS TO BE SHIPPED TO JAPAN

Chicago.—Herds of goats and sheep are soon to be sent from the United States to Japan for use of the Japanese government in developing stock raising, according to Dr. Ioda Tamamura, dean of animal industry of the University of Tokyo, who is here.

He came to Chicago recently from the east, where he has visited several universities, and after a day or two here he will continue his journey to San Francisco and Japan.

"We raise a few sheep in Japan," he said last night, "but no goats and our purpose is to go into the industry to a large extent, providing it will prove profitable and feasible in our climate."

Bad Check Artist Appears.

The Rohman bakery and grocery store was last evening victimized in the sum of $16 by a bad check artist who gave the name of West. The officers have no clue on which to work and it is doubtful if the man will be apprehended. He tendered a check for $20 in payment of $4 worth of groceries and after getting away with the change, left the groceries.

Recalls Former Avalanche.

News of the snowslide in Idaho which buried the town of Mace was read with interest by Bert Wilson, deputy in the office of Sheriff Taylor. The deputy sheriff was a former resident of northern Idaho and recalled this morning that exactly 22 years ago a slide came down the same identical canyon and buried the railroad track under 50 feet of debris for a distance of 600 feet.

"Great Divide" Is Here.

The members of the "Great Divide" troupe which is to appear at the Oregon theatre this evening arrived in town on the early morning train from the west. In order to reach Pendleton the troupe cancelled its engagement at The Dalles. The troupe playing "The House of a Thousand Candles" plays at Walla Walla tonight and according to Manager Mitchell, of the local playhouse, will be here on time tomorrow evening.

Three Are Bound Over.

Three accused men appeared before justice of the peace Joe H. Parkes today and were held to appear before the grand jury. John and Peter Bloom, father and son, waived examination on the charge of larceny from a dwelling and were held in the sum of $500 each. In default of this sum they were remanded to the custody of the sheriff. Wilbur Bailey, the Milton youth who was captured after a year's search, waived examination on the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses by means of a forged check and was held to appear under $300 bonds.

WOMEN OF NORTH YAKIMA OUTSPELL MEN'S TEAM

North Yakima, Wash.—The champion speller of North Yakima is H. M. Gilbert. He can spell such words as "Jaguerrootype," "elemosynary" and "cataclysm" without turning a hair, but even his remarkable facility with the alphabet was not sufficient to save from inglorious defeat the men of the Commercial club in a match spelling bee with the Woman's club. The challengers, the Woman's club, won by a score of 15 to 8 in a contest with time on a side, and according to baseball rules. A batter misspelling a word was counted out; three out to a side retired the side. If the batter could not spell a word, the nearest baseman was given a chance and then if necessary, a fielder, and if neither could spell it, the batter retained the base. City Superintendent of Schools D. C. Reed nobly seconded the efforts of Mr. Gilbert and made several home runs, but went down to defeat before the simple word "forcible," after triumphing over many syllables.

The entertainment, which was attended by all the club women of the city and their husbands, was to raise funds for a woman's clubhouse.

NEGRO DESCENDANT OF BROTHER OF ADAM

St. Louis.—That the negro did not get his color from Ham, and that he is not even a member of the race of Ham, but a descendant of one of the four or five brothers Adam must have had, is the belief of the Rev. Dr. Edwin H. Richards, for 39 years a missionary in Uganda, Africa.

"The negro never came from Ham. You can't get a black man from a white one, either by time or conditions," said Dr. Richards. "The black man is co-Adamite with Adam. Adam probably had about four brothers the Bible don't mention, and it was from one of these brothers that the negro must have descended."

"Better Goods For Less Money"

AT THE THEATER.

"Brewster's Millions."

It was a long, long wait that theater patrons had last night before they saw the reproduction of George Barr McCutcheon's "Brewster's Millions" on the stage of the Oregon theater. Owing to washouts and various other line disorders, the special Northern Pacific train bearing the show troupe did not arrive until 9:45 and it was exactly 11 o'clock when the asbestos rang up on Act I. Those who were not averse to keeping late hours and stayed in their seats, were rewarded for their overtaxed patience by a performance of real merit. The book as dramatized affords many interesting situations, all of which are built around the attempts of a young man to comply with the proviso in his uncle's will, namely the spending of a million dollars in a year, so that, thereby, he can inherit seven more millions.

Royal Tracy, who, as Monty, assumed this Herculean task, won great favor with the audience with his fresh, airy humor and his ludicrous behavior when Fate seemed determined to balk him of his one absorbing purpose. Miss Morgia Lytton, as Peggy, the motif of Monty's heart tremors, was a sweet girl of the modest, unassuming variety who stood out in striking contrast to the effusive, designing Barbara Drew, and the militant, masculine Janice Armstrong. A truthful recognition of the things as they are must compel us to admit, however, sorrowfully, that the latter two specimens of femininity are more representative of the modern woman than is the gentle, reserved Peggy.

There was only one thing in connection with the play that marred the enjoyment of the audience, and that thing was not intrinsic with the attraction but lay in the degenerate nature of some of the gallery gods. During the first act some drunken rowdies indulged in the "refined" sport of bombarding the pit with eggs that were past their prime, the pugnacity of which was emblematic of the character of those from whose hands they were hurled.

Several ladies and gentlemen were struck by these ancient products of the henry, and, needless to say, were in anything but an amiable frame of mind. Such creatures as the perpetrators of this outrage are fair representatives of man inferior to the lower animals, and could receive many ennobling lessons from the long-earred denizens of the barnyard. Certain, it is that they should be excluded from respectable society until they acquire a few of the primal requisites of manhood.

WHAT LEDFORD SAID.

At the Baptist Church Last Night in His Sermon.

"If a man really gets God in the heart he will not be a dead head."
"A man doesn't 'try' to love his wife. He loves her and he knows it and she knows it. If a man loves God be sure that he will know it and God will know it."

"Nowhere does God give any one license to sin. He says 'Don't do it.' But if you do sin, turn to God as quick as you can and get forgiveness."
"Jesus Christ is the Christian's advocate with the Father. A man out of Christ has no advocate."
