GOVERNMENT NEEDS NEW BUILDING IN WHICH TO HOUSE VARIOUS DEPARTMENTS

Washington.—When it comes to large and expensive enterprises in the structural line there is no man for the job like Scott (Rep. W. Va.), chairman of the senate committee on public buildings. Scott observed one day that the government pays about $250,000 annually in Washington for the rental of buildings, some of which reflected no credit on Uncle Sam, and that the old gentleman should house at least his important departments in buildings to which he held title. He figured on the best solution of the problem and evolved what is probably the second biggest building project in the history of the United States. The capitol cost $15,000,000 and he has introduced a bill in the senate to give it effect. The Scott building is to afford shelter for the departments of state, justice and commerce and labor. These departments are paying $80,000 a year for the use of privately owned buildings and yet their work is carried on under the greatest difficulties. The department of justice occupies seven buildings and the law library is located half a mile from the attorney general's office. Clerks are in many cases obliged to work at desks placed in hallways and in two buildings, a part of the force perform their daily labor in basements. Records of the department of justice, of great value, repose in the main building of that branch of the government which was originally an apartment house and is a tinder box.

The priceless archives of the state department are in the state, war and navy building, a fine structure that was rated fireproof years ago but hardly approaches the safety of modern structures. If those papers should be destroyed Uncle Sam's diplomacy would have no more symmetry than an aeroplane after butting into a lightning express. Many of these diplomatic questions drag along for generations. The Newfoundland fisheries question is older than the government and it has not yet been answered. It bobs up now and again and the secretary of state, before engaging in a parley, must read every word his predecessors have said on the subject. Diplomatically speaking, Uncle Sam with his records burned would fare ill, indeed. The department of Commerce and labor is established principally in a large block designed for business purposes. It, too, has valuable records, including the trust-busting information gleaned in various investigations. For all these reasons Senator Scott has planned to place the three departments in a marble masterpiece of architecture to cost the millions aforesaid and to occupy five squares between 14th and 15th streets and Pennsylvania avenue and the wall. The site adjoins the parking south of the treasury and has been acquired by the government. Everybody agrees with the senator that the thing ought to be done but all the members of congress will not vote for it. A good many of them reckon that $15,000,000 for this structure would mean some millions less for buildings in their own districts and they figure that the need for ornate federal structures in the cities of Sauterville, Bad Axe, Halfway and Fairview are reasonably important.

WU SEEKS MODEL.

Does Not Know What Country He Would Have His Own Imitate. Berlin.—Wu Ting-Fang left Berlin for Dresden and Vienna on the final stage of his journey through Europe on his way back to Pekin. Americans who have come in contact with China's greatest cross-examiner will not be surprised to learn that he is leaving the Occident in a question-asking mood. It is himself, however, whom the wily, witty Wu has been interrogating during his last days in the west, for the former minister at Washington is sorely perplexed as to whether the United States, England or Germany represents the civilization which China would best imitate.

He confesses that he is hopelessly at sea on this important point. His last hours in the kaiser's capital were devoted to securing such enlightenment as he could. As he had an opportunity to fraternize with a number of distinguished Americans the day before he left town, it may be assumed that the parting advice given to him was not to the disadvantage of the country where Wu confesses he spent the eight happiest years of his life. When asked if he intended to dash up to the Wei-Wu-Pu, which is Chinese for state department, in his automobile when he arrived in Pekin later in the spring, he said: "Probably not. You see, we Chinese diplomats who have lived abroad in a progressive atmosphere must be very careful about introducing new ideas in our own country. Our people don't like up-to-dateness forced on them. Automobiles and other achievements of Occidental civilization will gradually find a place in China, but they must come slowly."

Wu told his American friends in Berlin, including Ambassador Hill and ex-Vice president Fairbanks, that he had devoted a good deal of his recent term of service in Washington to mastering the science of good health. He became a vegetarian and a total abstainer, and is convinced that he has at least seventy-five years yet to live. I made several appointments to revisit American friends not later than 1950," said Wu, "and I have every intention of keeping each date."

Coughs That Hang On. Coughs that start in the fall and hang on until spring are sure trouble breeders unless checked and cured. Bronchitis, pneumonia and consumption are the direct result. Foley's Honey and Tar cures the cough, stops the hard breathing and heals and soothes the inflamed air passages. Refuse substitutes. Koepfen Bros.

MIDDIES WILL PRACTICE WITH PITCHING GUN

Annapolis, Md.—Baseball candidates at the Naval academy this season will try out a new pitching gun which is expected to give them all the preliminary training needed to face any rival pitcher. The gun in throwing a ball from the pitcher's box over the plate may be made to give a curve as wide as eight feet in any direction by a simple regulation in the breech.

The machine is the invention of one of the naval academy officers. It is operated with compressed air. Only 15 pounds pressure will be used, as this will give a speed equal to that of the fastest pitchers.
