ADVICE ABOUT PRUNING AND SPRAYING

By Ralph W. Allen, Superintendent Umatilla Experiment Farm, Hermiston, Ore.

It is a matter of considerable economy to prune before spraying. Especially is this true in old orchards where the trees are tall and large quantities of spray are required to treat them thoroughly. By having all the unnecessary branches removed the remaining one, being fewer in number, are more easily gotten at, thus shortening the time and minimizing the work required to make the application.

Many old orchards throughout the country upon which severe pruning have been inflicted for the purpose of restoring them to productiveness have responded by throwing out great numbers of water sprouts and making a large wood growth. Trees in this condition do not produce fruit as they should for several reasons. The heavy loss of branches destroys the equilibrium which naturally exists between the root system and top of the trees. The vigorous wood growth that follows a severe cutting back is an attempt made by the tree to regain the balance by getting, as quickly as possible, sufficient top and foliage to carry on the functions of the plant harmoniously with the root system. Such a practice is not advisable in treating apple, pear or cherry trees for they do not bear fruit on new wood, and consequently from one to three crops are lost before the tree regains normal health and begins fruiting. With peaches it is advisable as a means of producing a new top on the tree, thus increasing the amount of new wood upon which fruit is produced the following year. By heading back severely, old peach trees that have ceased to bear are invigorated and induced to begin fruiting again.

Young trees should be severely pruned each year to cause a heavy growth of wood. By so doing the branches become strong and will be able to bear the loads of future crops much better than if they were allowed to grow long and slender. Heavy pruning should be avoided on all trees that have reached bearing age.

There are a great many people who advise to prune in the winter for wood growth and in the summer for fruit production. This theory is true to a certain extent but should not be too closely adhered to. Heavy pruning at any time stimulates a rapid production of wood, and mild pruning during the summer causes a fuller development of the shoots and buds. For best results pruning should be done whenever it is seen that a branch needs to be removed, caused to grow at another angle, or headed back to prevent its growing too fast.

Considerable time is required to restore an old neglected orchard to a satisfactory condition. The pruning should be extended over two or three years, by removing a few of the branches each year until the tree is gotten into shape. This seems to be a slow way of getting an old orchard shaped up but when you think that it has had no care for many years it is hardly practical to expect to make up for this inattention all in one season and do it successfully. All wounds of one inch or more in diameter that are made in pruning should be painted over thoroughly with any ordinary paint to prevent the wood from decaying. Branches should never be removed in such a manner as to leave a stub. Every cut should be made close up to the body of the tree, or large branches as the case may be, even if a larger wound is made. When a stub is left it will die back and can never heal over, but when a smooth cut is made close to the large wood it will heal over in a short time.

Saved a Soldier's Life.
Facing death from shot and shell in the civil war was more agreeable to J. A. Stone of Kemp, Tex., than facing it from what doctors said was consumption. "I contracted a stubborn cough," he writes, "that developed into all remedies for years. My weight ran down to 130 pounds. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which completely cured me. I now weigh 178 pounds." For coughs, colds, la grippe, asthma, hemorrhage, hoarseness, croup, whooping cough and lung trouble, it is supreme. 50c, $1. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by Tallman & Co.

RAISE MORE HENS, CRY TO ENGLISH FARMERS

London.—A national movement is in progress throughout England with a view to showing the inhabitants of villages the profits that can be obtained from keeping poultry. The work is being carried on by the National Poultry Organization society, which has opened depots throughout the country, where the small landowner or laborer may take his produce and receive full retail prices.

As explained by the assistant secretary of the society the objects of the organization and its method of working are:

"We are trying to make the small holder see what a valuable asset his poultry may be made, and to help him to find the best market for his produce.

"We have opened produce all over the country, where the small holder or laborer may take his produce and receive the price that is being paid us by the shops. We make no profits whatsoever.

"I have not yet received the trade returns for 1909, but in 1908 the consumption of poultry produced in Great Britain amounted in value to more than $100,000,000, of which nearly half came from foreign countries.

"There is no reason at all why all our poultry produce and more should not be raised in this country. At present the number of hens kept in this country works out at about one per acre of cultivated land. If three hens per acre were kept we should have no need to rely on foreign countries."

INDICATIONS ARE THAT SEATTLE WILL BE "OPEN"

Seattle, Wash., March 8.—Indications point to the election of Hiram C. Gill, republican, as mayor of Seattle, in today's municipal contest. The success of Gill will mean a "wide open" town, and will be taken as an expression of the displeasure of the voters at the recent period of "restriction."

The fact that in the primaries the republicans cast 13,438 votes, giving Gill a majority of 3000 over his opponent, A. V. Bouillon, while the democrats cast only 2746 votes, is taken by many politicians to forecast Gill's election. William Hickman Moore was nominated as his opponent by the democrats.

Gill went before the people with the flat declaration for an open town, asserting that certain restrictions which have been enforced would be immediately removed if he was elected.

HAY IS SCARCE IN GURDANE COUNTRY

(Special Correspondence.)
Gurdane, Ore., March 8.—The ever welcome chinook wind is here and the backbone of the winter is broken. Nearly all the hay is gone and there is some lively rustling for feed. Andy Rust is running three teams daily from Pilot Rock. Chas. Ely and J. L. Hall are hauling hay and grain from the same place. D. R. Cate has driven his cattle to Pine City where he purchased hay. French and Brosman have their stock near Echo, where they secured feed.

A number of Camas Prairie stockmen have driven their stock to Pilot Rock, where they can get hay by the carload.

The warm wind is melting the snow so that every gully is a raging torrent and the roads are almost impassable. Bridges are washed out daily and the grades are cut in many ditches from two to seven feet deep. Marlon Smith, road boss of the Pilot Rock and Camas district, has a crew of men on the road every day.

J. L. Hall, road boss of district 24, has one crew of men on the Balm Grove road and several men on the Spring Hollow road. Every effort is being made to keep the roads open for the mail and for men to get feed to their stock. The great amount of snow in the mountains and on the foothills will keep everything in a slush for several days.

G. F. Jones has been quite sick for a couple of weeks.

Mrs. Myrtle White of Coulee City, is expected to arrive here in a few days. Mrs. White will take charge of the Gurdane store and will also be postmistress here. J. M. Ogle, the present postmaster, has resigned and will move with his family to the Willamette valley where they will reside in the future.
