CHIMNEY SWEEPS KILL BENEFACTRESSES

MURDER TWO WOMEN WHO GAVE THEM HELP

Tell Old Ladies Story of Woe and Receive Charity From Them—Return Kindness by Robbing and Killing Old Ladies—Sentenced to Life Imprisonment.

Paris.—Two Savoyards, aged respectively 19 and 20, who had embraced the usual career of chimney sweeps, have been tried at Nimes and found guilty of an atrocious crime—the murder of two old ladies who had, out of kindness, given them some work to do to keep them from starvation. One day last November the two lads, who had roamed all over the country without finding any work, knocked at the door of the two ladies, who lived alone in a house on the outskirts of the village of Breau, near Nimes, and told them that they were starving. They had only 7 cents left in their pockets. The ladies out of kindness gave them something to eat and let them clean the chimneys of the house, for which they paid them. There was no urgent need for this work, but the ladies, though they were themselves rather poor, had consented to it merely out of kindness. The chimney sweeps, on the contrary, thought that they were rich, and returned the following night to rob them. As often happens, they did not stop at mere robbery, but murdered their two benefactresses outright.

The next morning the crime was discovered. The elder of the two ladies was found dead in the hall, with her skull broken. Her sister was also lying dead in a room with a number of wounds in her head. Two little dogs, which had been great pets of the ladies, had been strangled. Suspicion immediately fell on the two Savoyards, who had been seen coming away from the house, and who had hurriedly left the locality. Their clothes as chimney sweeps were found near a stream, where they had evidently changed them for new ones, and they were next traced to a railway station where they had taken tickets for Paris.

Rapid inquiries at their native place showed that they had a relative in the capital, and the police inferred that they would at once seek him out. They were right, as the Savoyards went straight from the station to the home of the relative.

Detectives were waiting for them in the street and arrested them. They pleaded guilty at once, and were remanded for trial to the Assize Court at Nimes. The trial was short, and, though the public prosecutor asked for a sentence of capital punishment the jury returned a verdict of guilty, with extenuating circumstances. The prisoners were, in consequence, condemned to hard labor for life.

FEMALE FASHION MODELS ATTRACT GREAT CROWDS

Chicago.—"Diana at the Bath" had nothing on some of the living models at a great fashion show which opened Tuesday night in the Coliseum. In truth the models did not have much on themselves.

The show attracted a great crowd, as the latest creations in sheath gowns, pajamas, lingerie and chancery habits are being shown on 500 shapely young women. The men have a look-in this year, not only at the show, but the newest fashions for men are displayed. The managers of the show urge the men to bring their wives and sweethearts and educate them in what is proper, so as to avoid the customary heartaches of holidays and birthdays, when the loved ones inflict circus socks and racetrack neckties upon their male friends.

The show is destined to be the attraction of the week, as special nights have been set aside for theatrical, society and other classes, and the demand for tickets promises to fill the Coliseum every night. Some of the living models are so perfect and the gowns they display so costly that they are shown in glass cages.

BERNARD SHAW'S PLAY.

In Form Like "Getting Married"—Won't Require Four Hours.
London.—Some extraordinary stories have come from America concerning Bernard Shaw's new play, to be produced during Frohman's season at the Repertory theater, which opens next month, after the conclusion of the run of "Peter Pan" at the Duke of York's.

It has been stated for example that Mr. Shaw's play will require four hours for representation, that there will be no regular intervals, and that "it will be left for the audience to decide when the curtain should fall."

Although they have been repeated in this country, it is quite obvious that the statements are absurd. The truth probably is that Mr. Shaw's new play resembles in form his play of last year, "Getting Married," and it will no doubt be found that it will occupy about the same time in presentation, and that, though the action is continuous, there will be similar intervals for the convenience of the audience.

"Getting Married," it may be recalled, re-attained the Greek form by preserving all the unities of time and place. There was no division into acts, no change of scene, no impossible lapse of time. The performance was interrupted twice by the descent of the curtain for a few minutes, but this was done for obvious reasons connected with the personal convenience of the audience. When the curtain rose again, the play was picked up at the precise point at which it had descended.

ANNA GOULD IS NOW A SUBJECT OF THE KAISER

Paris.—Madame Anna Gould has assumed her new title of "Duchess de Talleyrand et de Sagan." Moreover, she has ceased to be a citizen of either France or the United States, and has become a subject of the German Kaiser.
As the wife of Count Boni de Castellane she acquired a French citizenship; as the wife of the new Duke de Talleyrand she shares his allegiance to the German emperor and becomes a German subject for, property reasons. The estates of the late duke are at Sagan, in northern Germany, and in spite of the mountains of debt piled on them they are extremely valuable.
They are now under the guardianship of the kaiser and are bringing in a revenue of $90,000 yearly, which is applied to the upkeep of the estates, interest on debts and other legal charges.
In order to keep his Sicilian estates as a subject of the kaiser, the present duke will have to follow the example of his late father and become a German subject. This is indispensable, as the kaiser cannot continue to act as guardian of a French citizen. It is understood that the new duke and duchess have already taken preliminary steps and possibly in time will desert France for Germany, where they have been advised they will be received at court and enter the best society.

Colonel Perry Fyffe, who was recently appointed by President Taft, is on his way to take charge of the police of the canal zone. The new chief is a soldier and an editor. When appointed to his present position he was managing editor of the Chattanooga News. He was graduated from the University of Kentucky and is a lawyer.
