A PRISON POISON PLOT.

Lieutenant Hofrichter Tried to Get Drug to Produce Madness. Vienna.—It is reported that Lieutenant Hofrichter, who is under arrest on a charge of sending poison capsules as patent medicine to officers of the Austrian general staff, and with having thus caused the death of one officer, has made further remarkable attempts to defeat the ends of justice. A warder named Tutman, employed in the prison, and his sister, have been arrested for complicity.

Letters smuggled out of prison by Hofrichter are now in the possession of the authorities, and it appears that the lieutenant endeavored, by means of a forged prescription which he gave to the warder, to obtain from a chemist a drug which has the effect of producing enlargement of the pupils of the eyes and delirium.

TO STUDY UNDER THE SEA.

New Scientific Expedition to Delve in the North Atlantic.

London—Curious tales of the sea were related at a dinner given by the Atlantic Union, over which Lord Kinaird presided. The guests of the evening were Sir John Murray and a number of Norwegian officers who have left Plymouth in the Michael Stars on a scientific expedition to the North Atlantic.

In speaking about the marvels of oceanography Sir John mentioned for example, the fact that an enormous number of creatures at the bottom of the sea have the power of producing their own light.

When some of these are hauled up and placed on deck their displays of phosphorescence are something wonderful. This, Sir John said, was one of the problems which scientists had yet to solve.

FOOTBALL IS OLD AMERICAN GAME

HAS BEEN PLAYED IN COLLEGES SINCE 1840

From Crude Beginning, Game Has Developed Into Highly Specialized Sport—Started in Class Rushes.

New York.—Football at American colleges runs back beyond the memory of the oldest living graduate. But the kind of football that was played back in the '40s was of such a crude character that it would hardly be recognized as the second great American game of today. In those early days it served more as an excuse for a rush between the sophomores and the freshmen.

The football of the early college days gave place to rushes between the classes, which were practically the same as the football game of that day, except that the ball was not used. These rushes, at first governed by no laws or rules, took on a form of organization during the '60s. There was no game about it during the '60s, but a ball was kicked about and more or less amusement derived from it.

In the early '70s, however, a number of Rugby boys at Harvard revived the game, and it was taken up in earnest and associations organized at several of the colleges. In 1872 Columbia University played a match game with Yale, on the 16th of November.

There were twenty men on a side, and the game was nearer the English association than the English rugby. The costumes of those days were long trousers and jerseys. The rules were simple and forbade anyone picking up, carrying or throwing the ball. There were no "on" or "off" side rules, and goals were made by sending the ball under the crossbar instead of over it.

Fouls were penalized by making the players who had committed the foul toss the ball straight up in the air from the place where the foul occurred, and it was unfair to touch the ball until it had touched the ground. This particular rule gave rise later to a good deal of skillful drop kicking, the man kicking the ball just as it touched the ground. Although the game was played with twenty men on a side, when a man was disabled instead of sending in a substitute a man was dropped from the other side.

It was not until 1874 that football began its present career of interest in American colleges. In that year football clubs were formed in many of the American colleges, each institution having five or six teams which played interclass games.

The first match games played between teams of different colleges under the American rules was played on old Forbes Field at Cambridge, Mass., between Harvard and McGill university of Montreal, Canada. This game was played on May 14, 1874, and resulted in a victory for Harvard by three touchdowns against McGill nothing. The players on the Harvard team were Tyler, Lombard and Goodrich tenders; Cabott, Grant and Whiting, half tenders, and Sangor, Morse, Lyman, Randall and Leeds rushers.

The McGill players were Rodger and Gilbert tenders; Abbott, Joseph, Thomas and Goodhue, half tenders, and Baynes, Jenkins, Hall, Huntington and Bowie rushers. Emmons Blaine, son of James G. Blaine, former secretary of state, was a member of the Harvard club, and acted as linesman in this game.

J. P. JR. SAYS LIVE MEN ARE IN DEMAND

New York.—"Do I think that the young men of today have as many opportunities as those of the previous generation?" J. P. Morgan, Jr., slowly repeated after the visitor who sought to interview him today. "Why of course I do, but it all depends upon the young man. By studying his employer's interests he is but furthering his own. By close application and utter disregard for how slowly the hand of the clock moves around the dial, he must succeed. Time servers and sluggards have no place in the world today; it is the bright, keenly alert youth with intelligence stamped upon his face, who is at all times eager and willing to do the work of his superior that heads of departments in the field of finance and commerce are seeking. Such men can always get employment and the rest depends upon themselves.

"Wall street is full of such young men and you and I will live to see them succeed to business of their own."

"It is the same old story the world over. Hard and intelligent work and integrity will land any young man at the top of the heap and if he keeps up a stout heart and plugs away at the task set before him. Such men are in demand and employers from one end of the country to the other are looking for them."

CHINESE GENERAL IS NOTED GERMAN SCHOLAR

Berlin.—The world has long been familiar with Anglo-German, German-Americans and others of the type that the kaiser once designated as "hyphenated patriots," but there is probably only one "Chino-German." He is General Yint-Chang, who is about to retire from the post of Chinese minister at Berlin to become war minister at Peking.

General Yint-Chang's claim to the title of a "Chino-German" rests upon his amazing fluency in the German language.

He has not only fully conquered the language, but has acquired the Berlin or "military" dialect so faultlessly that all trace of his exotic origin long since disappeared from his speech. There is no foreign diplomat at the kaiser's court who can speak better German, and very few who can speak as well.

The general, a trim, well-knit, soldierly figure, acquired his command of German while serving as a lieutenant in the Prussian army 29 years ago. Since then he has been minister at Berlin on two different occasions.

The Bad Effects of CONSTIPATION

Impure blood, offensive breath, heavy head, shortness of breath, bilious attacks, fitful sleep, loss of appetite, feverish conditions, all come from one cause—Constipation.

The Good Effects of BEECHAM'S PILLS

lerly figure, acquired his command of German while serving as a lieutenant in the Prussian army 29 years ago. Since then he has been minister at Berlin on two different occasions. A story is told of how he frightened two German soldiers nearly out of their wits during the Boxer uprising of 1900. General Yint-Chang was commander of the arsenal at Tientain when that city was bombarded and seized by the allies.

Meeting one day a couple of the kaiser's infantrymen prowling in forbidden parts, General Yint-Chang, recognizing their nationality, snarled at them in the most approved Prussian fashion:

"Out with you, you bilthering blockheads, or I'll give you one on the side of your jaw that will set you spinning!"

This was rattled off in the choicest Berlin nasal-drawl, which is the exclusive property of officers in barracks.

The German soldiers were breathless with astonishment at hearing themselves addressed in such unmistakably homely accents by a Chinese officer.

KAISER TO HONOR TEDDY ROOSEVELT

Berlin, May 3.—Berliners are looking forward to the visit of ex-President Roosevelt early this month, with great curiosity, while the American colony is preparing to cheer itself hoarse from the moment of his arrival until his departure. Americans are immensely flattered by the fact that the kaiser invited the famous statesman and his wife to take up their quarters in the royal palace. In point of fact, it is a very exceptional honor.

There is endless speculation as to the course the visit will take. A lecture by Mr. Roosevelt in the aula of the university, a banquet at the palace, another at the American ambassador's, a gala performance at the opera, a reception given by the American chamber of commerce and a visit to Potsdam are certain to be features of the four days' sojourn, but no one knows how the intervals will be filled up. The distinguished guest will speak in public, besides delivering his lecture and conjecture is rife as to whether he will commit any indiscretion similar to the Cairo incident.

Many other conjectures are in the air. Will the kaiser go to the station to meet him? Will he eat off gold plate at the palace? Will the kaiser call him "colonel" or plain "mister" and a host of questions of the kind. When the visit is over some humorous historian ought to write a "Yankee at the Court of Kaiser Wilhelm."
