PUBLISHERS ENDORSE THE AMERICAN WOMAN'S LEAGUE

The following resolutions of the publishers' committee of the American Woman's League are so strong an endorsement of Mr. E. G. Lewis and the league, that they are reprinted from the Woman's National Daily for the benefit of the local chapter recently organized here, and of prospective members.

Whereas, The publishers' committee of the American Woman's League assembled at its first regular meeting in New York on April 26th, 1910, has carefully studied the aims, methods and management of the league, and is convinced of the underlying and thoroughly genuine sincerity and practicability of the management and plans of the league, and of the far-reaching value of the opportunities offered to the women of America; it is therefore

Resolved, That the committee unanimously desires to give strong expression to the confidence felt by each member in Mr. E. G. Lewis and his associates in the conduct of the league past and present, in their honesty of purpose, and in their efficiency of management; and it is further

Resolved, That the committee unanimously pledges its hearty support in the furtherance of the league's plans, and recommends to each periodical of Class "A" that the accomplishments and purposes of the league be made more widely known by co-operative publicity, and to the end that the women of this country may realize and understand the splendid opportunities which the league offers at no expense of money and at a nominal expense in time or service; and it is further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to every periodical associated with the league and to the officers of the league at University City.

Authority was given by each member of the Committee present at the meeting to sign his name to this resolution and to permit the publication of the resolution so signed in the League Booklet shortly to be issued. It was further

Resolved, That absent members be given an opportunity by correspondence to also sign this resolution.

COMET SHINES LIKE SEARCHLIGHT AT BEND

Bend, Ore.—Residents in and about Bend for the past week have been rising long before dawn to catch the first glimpse of Halley's comet. The first early riser a week ago saw but a small portion of the tail, but towards the last of the week and early this week the vastness of the tail's expanse became apparent and plainly visible to the naked eye. Since the heavy storms over a week ago, the atmosphere and skies of western Crook county have been clear as crystals, a circumstance which has given residents in this vicinity probably the best view of the comet of any place in the state. The lightness of the atmosphere is also conducive to a remarkably clear view of the heavenly visitor. From the main streets of Bend the comet rises directly over Pilot Butte, an extinct volcano, about 600 feet in height, a mile and a half east of town. A week ago when the residents here first began their early morning observations the tail of the comet, figuratively speaking, appeared about two feet long. Each succeeding morning the length has greatly increased, until now the sweep of the tail extends upward from the central body at an angle of about 25 degrees for a tremendous distance. To the observer here the tail is exactly like the gleam of a searchlight thrown across the heavens in the dead of night and for an hour or more after sunrise the white glare is still plainly visible. The tail extends from the white mass at its apex eastward in the form of a V turned on its side. Dozens of people here are nightly watching the strange visitor as it rushes towards the earth.
