HOLDMAN DECIDES TO CELEBRATE FOURTH

PREPARATIONS ARE BEING MADE FOR BIG TIME
 Fifty Dollars Has Already Been Subscribed—Ladies Aid Clear Thirty-five Dollars on Social—Other News Notes.

(Special Correspondence.)
 Holdman, Ore., May 16.—Holdman is determined to be in the front rank for a Fourth of July celebration, over fifty dollars having been raised at this time, so that a regular old time fourth with spread eagle orations, sports, races, greased pig and all other accessories is assured.

Miss Maud Bently returned home Saturday from Pendleton where she had been visiting during the week.
 The Ladies Aid at their recently given dinner and ice cream social, cleared thirty-five dollars, after donating dinner to the two ball teams. The money is being applied as part of their pledge on the recently erected church.

George Stangler of Pendleton, who was quite seriously injured here on May 8, is reported out of the hospital and able to travel with the aid of a pair of wooden legs.
 Chester Deal was a visitor to Pendleton Saturday. Will Deal and Miss Ruth Keller have been visiting for a few days with friends and relatives in Pendleton.

Quite a number of people went from Holdman yesterday to Hermiston to see a ball game between the home team and one of the Hermiston teams. The game resulting in a score of 12 to 5 in favor of Holdman.

F. S. McCrea, our merchant has added quite an extensive line of dry goods to his stock and intends to catch the trade.

Clarence Comer of Helix, president of the Farmers' Union, addressed quite a gathering at the hall Saturday night, and all were well pleased with his address.

Mr. and Mrs. Gentry returned from the Athena picnic Saturday evening and report a general good time, but narrowly missed getting their little babe injured or killed. As Mrs. Gentry was preparing to put it in the baby cab to sleep some of the seats fell

OLD INDIAN WARRIORS ARE GRANTED PENSIONS

Washington.—An echo of the Indian wars was heard in the senate a few days ago, when Senator Dixon of Montana, called up the cases of Bull Snake and Old Coyote, Crow Indians with war records but no pensions. A committee recommended that Bull Snake and Old Coyote be paid $13 each a month, but Dixon insisted on making the rate $20.

"Old Coyote and Bull Snake," he said, "these two Crow Indians, were wounded in battle with General Crook on the Rosebud reservation fighting the Sioux thirty-four years ago this coming June 15. When Crook was hemmed in by the Sioux on the Rosebud he sent couriers to the Crows for help. They sent 120 of their young men and these two Indians. Old Coyote's shoulder blade was shattered. For thirty-four years the old men have dragged over the country without pension, without reward of any kind from the government. Both of them are old men at this time, and I do think $20 a month under these circumstances is certainly a pitiful allowance for this great government to render to these old men who were shot in battle under these circumstances."
 On that showing the rate asked by Dixon was granted by the senate.

Deceiving the Widow.
 A healthy looking woman dressed in deep mourning stepped on to the platform scales and requested the grocer's clerk to ascertain her weight. He looked and said, "One hundred and forty pounds."
 "You made a mistake of twelve pounds in that woman's weight," said another man who had also watched the scales. "She weighed 152 pounds instead of 140."
 "I know that," said the clerk, "but she never would have forgiven me if I had told her so. That woman's husband died about six weeks ago. She has gained seven pounds in that time, but to keep her in good humor with herself I had to make her think she had lost five. I don't know why it is, but anybody who has suffered bereavement seems to consider it a disgrace to take on flesh. That woman has been weighed three times since her husband died. She would be shocked if she knew she had gained right along. Fortunately she is too nearsighted to read the scales herself, so it is easy to make her think she is wasting away."
 —New York Press.

Law and the Queen.
 The quaintness of many provisions of British law is curiously illustrated in the status of the queen of England. So far as her majesty's private business is concerned, she is not regarded by the laws and customs of England as a married woman at all. She is the only woman in Great Britain who does not come within the scope of the married woman's property act. The idea in all this is that affairs of state consume all the time of the king, and therefore no responsibility for the queen's private business rests upon him. If the queen contracted debts in her husband's name he would not be responsible for them, as any other husband in the United Kingdom would. The king cannot be sued for debt, but the queen can be. Should the king die, some authorities hold that the queen could not marry again, in case she wished to, without the license of the king's successor.—New York Tribune.

Dog Law in Constantinople.
 "When one of the street dogs of Constantinople gets too old to be of use to the hand the captain dog decides that he is to die," says Albert Bigslew Palm in Harper's Weekly. "A day comes when the captain issues an edict that he is no longer to have food. From that day until his death not a morsel passes his lips. With longing eyes he looks at the others eating, but he makes no attempt to join them. Now and again a bit of something falls his way. The temptation is too strong—he reaches toward the morsel. The captain, who overlooks nothing, gives a low growl. The dying creature shrinks back without a murmur. He knows the law. Perhaps he, too, was once a captain. The minister's wife told me that she had tried to feed one of those dying dogs, but that even when food was placed in front of him he would only look pleadingly at the captain and refuse to touch it."

How They Get 'Em.
 The sad looking man climbed into the bootblack's chair to have his shoes shined.
 "And is your father a bootblack, too?" he asked, by way of making conversation.
 "No, sir," replied the lad. "My father is a farmer."
 "Ah, a farmer?" cried the sad looking man as a spasm almost akin to joy spread over his features. As he reached into his pocket for a notebook and pencil he began to mumble a sort of gibberish. It sounded like this:
 "Farmer, hey? Farmer—hay. Son, bootblack. Son shines. Ah! I have it. Your father evidently believes in making hay while the sun shines."
 Perhaps it is useless to explain that instead of being a mild lunatic the sad looking man was one of those professional humorists who write funny pieces for the papers.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Laughter Saved the Ship.
 Humor has been credited with the saving of many things, but perhaps never before has a ship been saved by its judicious application. In a great storm many years ago a ship's crew were all at prayers when a boy burst into a fit of violent laughter. Being reproved for his ill timed mirth and asked the reason for it, he said, "Why, I was laughing to think what a hissing the boatswain's red nose will make when it comes in contact with the water." This ludicrous remark set the crew laughing, inspired them with new spirits, and by a great exertion they brought the vessel safely into port.—Liverpool Post.

Two Narrow Escapes.
 An Irishman, seeing a vessel very heavily laden and scarcely above the water's edge, exclaimed, "Upon my soul, if the river was but a little higher the ship would go to the bottom!"
 "See there!" exclaimed the returned Irish soldier to the gaping crowd as he exhibited with some pride his tall hat with a bullet hole in it. "Look at that hole, will ye? Ye see, if it had been a low crowned hat I should have been killed outright."

His Temper.
 "My dear," said a lady to her husband, "there must be a lot of iron in your system."
 "Why do you think so?"
 "Because you invariably lose your temper when you get hot!"

Discoveries.
 So many famous discoveries have turned out to be re-discoveries that we become cautious about asserting that any event or achievement was the first of its kind.—John Diske.

FIRST ALFALFA CROP READY FOR SICKLE

HERMISTON FARMERS PREPARE FOR HARVEST

By Middle of Week Will All Be Engaged in Making Hay—Hermiston Boys Suffer Defeat—Other News Notes from Project Town.

(Special Correspondence.)
 Hermiston, Ore., May 23.—The middle of the week will see most every farmer around Hermiston busy cutting his first crop of alfalfa. The first crop is fine and prospects are good for three other good crops.
 Yesterday the local boys met defeat from the Umatilla team, thus breaking the hoodoo which has hung over the latter. The feature of the game was a home run hit made by one of the Umatilla boys, thereby winning the game for them. Everyone here is glad to see Umatilla get a game, even though they had to take it from the top notchers.

Wm. Rath and daughter of Avoca, Minnesota, were here yesterday looking over the project under the guidance of the Columbia Land company. Mayor George Coe of Stanfield spent several hours in Hermiston yesterday. John Intlekofer, recently of Iowa, has a force of men building a fine cottage on his ranch north of Hermiston.

J. W. Wied has returned to his home in Jefferson, Oregon, after spending a few days here on business. W. P. Littlefield of the Littlefield-Campbell company, has returned from a six weeks' stay at Seattle, Washington.

This week will see much improvement work done around the office and warehouses of the Inland Empire Lumber company.

The Pastime.
 The following new program for Tuesday's change:
 "Papants." Selig. Drama. 1000 feet long. A story of love and jealousy with a lively elopement and marriage and the escape of the fleeing pair through the aid of a friendly surveyor.
 "The Miner's Sweetheart." Dramatic. Length, 1000 feet. It is one of those pictures possessing a subtle power that holds one's sympathies throughout the length.
 "Love and Marriage in Poster Land." Comedy. A unique and altogether delightful comedy.
 "The Senator and the Suffragette." Comedy. There are some hearty laughs concealed in this and it is sure to please.

"Jes Put It In Ma Pocket"
 ADVERTISING TALK NO. 5.
 A story is told of a traveler who, while walking through a lane in one of Kentucky's rural districts one hot summer day came upon three boys sitting on the fence of an adjoining field.
 Their heads were hanging wearily and their eyes were barely open. Such don't-care and woe-begon expressions he had never before seen on the faces of mortal men.
 "Well, you're a sorry bunch," he exclaimed. "I think you are the laziest individuals I ever saw in my life."
 "I'd just like to find out which one is the laziest, and I'll tell you what I'll do. I am going up the road here a ways and when I return I am going to give a five dollar bill to the one who looks the laziest."
 Then the traveler went his way and in about an hour he returned. All three boys had fallen off the fence. One had managed to crawl partly under the shade of a nearby tree where he lay apparently fast asleep; another was reclining against the fence.
 But the third boy had stayed just where he fell. Sprawled out in the dust, his legs and arms limp as rags and the sun of a midsummer's day pouring its merciless rays down upon him, he presented a spectacle of despair.
 The traveler walked over to him, partly roused him, and said:
 "I've decided that you're the laziest; here's your five dollars."
 Without shifting position and the muscles of his face barely moving, the boy drawled, "Jes put it in ma pocket."
 Now isn't that just about the limit?
 But, don't you know—no offense intended—some business men's appreciation of the value of advertising is on a par with that boy's appreciation of his good fortune.
 They won't do anything to go after trade. Maybe they have advertised one or twice, failed to get results and then quit, declaring they will never try it again.
 Don't expect to have money handed to you a silver platter. Advertising is the hammering part of business building. If you were building a house, you would expect to keep right on pounding until the last nail was driven, wouldn't you?
 It's the unsuccessful merchant who tells you his advertising didn't pay. Of course not; he didn't make it pay; he didn't keep on hammering.
 To succeed you must keep in action day after day and month after month.
