THE CLASS OF 1910 PASSES INTO HISTORY

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES
WERE OF HIGH ORDER

Large Crowd Assembled to Hear Program of Graduating Class of High School—Orations Reflect Credit Upon Institution.

Before an audience which taxed the capacity of the Methodist church to the limit, twenty-three students composing the largest class ever graduated from the Pendleton high school, were last night awarded diplomas at the completion of a splendid commencement program. Nine of the out-going seniors represented the class by orations which were of a high quality, both in composition and delivery and amply fulfilled the hope voiced by the salutorian that they would reflect credit upon the institution in which the class has received its instruction.

After an organ voluntary by Mrs. A. J. Owens and an invocation by Rev. Ralph E. Storey, Miss Pansy Ireland delivered the salutatory, bidding the people welcome and expressing in a few words the significance of the occasion. She was followed by Harvey McDill in an oration on "Scientific Farming," in which he pointed out the advantages of modern methods, rotation of crops, conservation of moisture, diversified and intensive farming, and at the same time sounded a warning to those who persisted in their obsolete and ruinous ways of tilling the soil. Two vocal solos by Miss Bernice Ruppe were heartily received by the audience.

Miss Laura McKee in an oration, "The Storehouse of Literary Treasures," told something of the great value of the heritage which the men and women of letters have bequeathed to the world. She was followed by Lyman Rice, who urged the adoption of a central banking system by the United States in vigorous language and in a forceful manner. A vocal solo by Mrs. J. S. Landers was greatly appreciated, and an oration "Conservation of Our Natural Resources," by Hawley Bean, very effectively presented one of the most important of our national problems, and advocating a policy securing a maximum of efficiency with a minimum of waste.

Miss Lottie Mentzer's oration on "The Work of Jane Addams," was a deep appreciation of the worth and work of one of America's greatest women. Hans Struve followed with an oration entitled "Conquest of the Air" which traced the history of man's achievements in soaring since its origin and predicted its advance in the immediate future.

Miss Edith Crockett in her oration, "The Twenty-first Century," held the entire attention of the audience as she raised the veil of the future and showed the life of the next century, with its advancement in all lines. Lawrence Whitman concluded the students' part of the program with a splendid valedictory address in which he expressed all that commencement meant to the class, its obligations, its regrets, and its promises.

In the absence of Dr. C. J. Smith, chairman of the board of education, Supt. J. S. Landers made the concluding address and presentation of diplomas. Two beautiful vocal selections by Miss Edna Gates and a benediction by Rev. Nathan Evans completed the program of the evening.

A number not on the program brought forth great applause from the audience. When the last diploma had been awarded which marked the passing into history of the class of 1910, a thread was pulled and a large banner on which were the numerals "1911," was unfurled and dropped over the heads of the graduates as an emblem of the class which had inherited all of the power, wisdom and dignity which attaches to the name "senior."

The personnel of the outgoing class is as follows:

Hawley Bean, Grace Bean, Iva Helen Black, Thomas Boylen, Jr., Cecile Cole, Marguerite Cooley, Edith L. Crockett, P. Campbell Crockett, Aubrey G. Graham, Gladys Hamley, Pansy Ireland, Katherine Lea Kirkpatrick, J. Harvey McDill, Lottie Mentzer, Laura Isabel McKee, Zetta Price, Lyman G. Rice, Jewell A. Rook, Cleo F. Straghan, Hans Struve, Fred E. Wabser, J. Laurence Whitman and Quindora Wilcox.

All were the recipients of many beautiful gifts.
