Auto Burns Up.

Dr. D. C. McNabb, the veterinarian, is mourning the loss of his Maxwell runabout. Sunday he received a call to the Cresswell farm and was making a rather speedy run in an effort to be able to render the services needed in as short a time as possible, when suddenly his machine stopped and he was unable to make it go either forward or back. After exhausting his automobile knowledge in an effort to make her go, he picked up his medicine case and started on foot. Returning a few hours later he was surprised to find nothing but the charred skeleton of his machine standing in the road. The cause of the fire will probably always remain a mystery. The doctor is engaged today in making arrangements for a new machine and will probably be better equipped than ever in a few hours.

CENSUS SHOWS FRANCE IS A DYING NATION

Paris—"The time will come when Germany, having on its borders a magnificent but unoccupied country, will find it absurd not to take possession of it."
Thus Dr. Jacques Bertillon, the famous statistician, summed up the significance of the census of France, just finished.
"Births," he continued, "are diminishing in number steadily. There are almost 200,000 less annually now than in 1871. The drop in the last seven years has been 100,000, while other nations show an increase.

"Yet nothing is done. Alas! What will become of our country? We are assisting at a slow but certain suicide. No one suffers and no one complains. It is not even death, putting it brutally!

"Our country, however marvelously endowed by nature, contains only seventy-two inhabitants to the square kilometer, while Germany has nearly 120. Germany yearly sees about 1,000,000 increase in population, requiring food and warmth. Hence factories are started, mines run, and lands developed to the utmost.

But how can French workshops increase when France itself is not increasing? Foreigners, always slightly malevolent, call us a dying nation! This hard word is in a fair way to become correct!"

Dr. Bertillon explains a slight surplus of births over deaths last summer by pointing out that the cold weather caused infant mortality to be less. He urged immediate legislation as the only preventive of national suicide.

COAL STRIKE COSTS $17,000,000 EXTRA

Chicago.—Extra expenses amounting to $17,000,000 a year, borne by the members of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, as a result of the coal strike, caused a meeting of the association in the Hotel La Salle to devise ways and means to eliminate the extra expense. The meeting was preceded by a conference with coal dealers in the office of Secretary Glenn for the purpose of drawing up plans and preparing resolutions to be submitted at the meeting.

The coal dealers declared that there is mined in Illinois 43,000,000 tons of coal a year, and of this 17,000,000 tons are consumed by Illinois manufacturers. On account of the strike these purchasers have to buy coal in other states, and the extra freight rates are costing them $1 a ton. The railroads also are heavy losers because of the strike.

The head of one manufacturing concern stated that he was paying $900 a day more for coal than under normal conditions.

"I don't know whether or not we shall be able to do anything to relieve the situation, but we are going to do our best," said the secretary shortly before the meeting was called to order. "I cannot say whether negotiations will be opened with the miners or the operators, but neither party is represented at this meeting."

"At the annual meeting of the United Mine Workers' association in March a scale of wages was agreed upon and the Illinois representatives agreed to the scale, as did the operators."

"But John W. Walker, president of the Illinois Mine Workers, tried to be elected president of the national organization, and failed. His plans slipped a cog and T. H. Lewis of Indianapolis was elected. Now Walker and his crowd are 'sore' and are trying to get even and that is the whole secret of the strike. The operators are asking 5.55 per cent increase in wages over and above the scale agreed upon at the national convention."

AFTER WEDDING LEARNS BRIDE HAS FORTUNE

Kalamazoo, Mich. — "I wanted to be sure the man of my choice loved me, and not my money, so I didn't tell him that I had fallen heir to a fortune until the eve of our wedding," said Mrs. Joseph Kosten, who until Thursday night was Miss Dena Vogel, and formerly employed in a local shirt factory.
The girl was left a considerable sum of money by the death of an uncle several weeks ago, and soon after her father died and his estate added to her possessions. She made no mention of the fact to Kosten, however, until Wednesday evening when he came here from his home in Grand Rapids for the wedding. The couple have gone to Grand Rapids, where they will reside.

Aged 119 Years—Fought Napoleon.

St. Petersburg.—St. Petersburg has been entertaining a most remarkable old man. His name is Kniakoff and he served in the Russian army which harried Napoleon on the retreat from Moscow which really broke the power of the great Corsican. Kniakoff is 119 years old and remembers the burning of the old Russian capital distinctly. He was the guest of the general staff and told many interesting incidents of the fighting of nearly 100 years ago. Despite his advanced age his mental faculties are unimpaired and his physical condition is remarkable.

La Grande, Ore.—Perry Clark, a pioneer of this county, died Monday morning. He was a prominent republican. He had lived in La Grande more than 30 years.

FOOD FOR THE GUILLOTINE.

Some Peculiar Types of French Criminals.
Paris.—The Paris executioner, M. Delbier, arrived at Sisteron, in the Basses-Alpes, recently for the purpose of executing a murderer named Olice, and found himself in an unpleasant predicament. The guillotine, which had been dispatched from Paris 48 hours previously, had not arrived.
There was the greatest excitement in the town. Telegrams were dispatched in all directions and finally the truant guillotine was located at another station and hurriedly forwarded to Sisteron.

The condemned man heard the uproar and was with difficulty persuaded that it had no reference to his fate. The execution was duly carried out.
Olice or Fanzoni—the latter believed to be his correct name—was the chief of a bloodthirsty band of adventurers, known as the "Strangers of the Alps." He and several companions had been indicted for a murder of peculiar ferocity, but the jury somehow found extenuating circumstances for the accomplice. Olice himself had hopes to the last that his own neck might be saved.

Vidal, a man condemned to death for a triple crime, was executed at the same hour at Algiers. When the judicial authorities roused him by entering his cell, he understood that his hour had come, thanked his counsel, conversed with the prison chaplain, and after taking a glass of rum, submitted without a murmur to the "toilette." Vidal walked with a firm step to the guillotine and was attempting to address the crowd when he was seized and thrown on the fatal plank.
