MONEY MEN ARE COMING

Important Convention Will Convene at Eagle-Woodman Hall at 10 Tomorrow.

MANY COURTESIES WILL BE SHOWN

Smoker, Banquet and Trip to Wenaha Springs Will be Features of Gathering—Autos Will Take Visitors to Mountain Resort Where Trout Luncheon Will be Served—After the Festive Trout Today.

At 10 o'clock tomorrow the annual convention of the state bankers' association will be called to order in this city.

Some time during the session tomorrow it is hoped to take the bankers upon a trip through the woolen mill for the purpose of demonstrating how the famous Pendleton Indian robes are made.

Saturday morning bright and early, to-wit, 7 o'clock, the entire delegation will be taken aboard automobiles supplied by local people, and taken upon a whirl to Wenaha springs which resort is now making ready for their coming.

The big feature of the stay at the springs will be a trout luncheon furnished under the auspices of the entertainment committee and the members of the local anglers' association.

After the return from Wenaha a banquet will be served at the Quella and it will mark the close of the convention.

During the two days session of the bankers' convention a prearranged program will be carried out and it will consist in the main part of discussions on subjects of a financial nature.

At the session tomorrow forenoon the gathering will be called to order by President R. W. Schmeier, who is cashier of the U. S. national bank of Portland. The invocation will be by Rev. Charles Quinney, rector of the Church of the Redeemer.

The arrangements for entertaining the bankers' convention are being made by a committee composed of W. L. Thompson, G. M. Rice, T. G. Montgomery, George Hartman, Jr., and J. R. Raley.

It is announced that the sessions of the bankers' convention will be open to such business men as care to attend them. The smoker tomorrow evening will also be opened to business men of this city.

The Auto Brigade. T. G. Montgomery and George Hartman, Jr., have been engaged during the past few days listing automobiles for the trip to Wenaha springs Saturday morning.

As arranged the autos will meet at the Pendleton garage in time to leave at 7 o'clock Saturday morning. Four
