IRISH PATRIOTS WILL COME OVER TO U. S.
 Dublin.—John Redmond, T. P. O'Connor and Joseph Devlin are making preparations for their American trip. While the date of their departure has not been definitely announced, they probably will sail late in August and will remain in the United States several weeks. They are in constant communication with the leaders of Irish thought in the United States and in their itinerary will be guarded largely by the wishes of their American friends.

 Mr. Redmond is watching closely the developments of the conference which is seeking to find some way out of the British constitutional muddle. He is not hopeful, but if the British leaders should reach an agreement which is not inimical to home rule he will support it. If any attempt is made, however, to sidetrack home rule, there will be trouble.
 Mr. Redmond does not, like some parliamentarians, seize upon any excuse to get upon his feet, but rarely rises unless he has something to say. And he says it with sledge-hammer emphasis and diction that invariably attracts all the shirkers back to the "green benches."
 He first figured prominently in the political history of Ireland in 1880, when he accompanied Mr. Parnell to the famous meeting at Ennisorthy, when they were nearly murdered by a hostile mob.
 Mr. Redmond entered parliament soon afterward as the member for New Ross. Unlike most new members, he delivered his maiden speech on the night he took his seat, and he holds the record of being suspended before the close of the sitting.
 He is a fine billiard player, a practiced hand at the foils, rides well, as frequent visitors to Hyda park have many opportunities of observing; is a good shot and can still give a good account of himself in front of a wicket. His football days are past, but he still takes a deep interest in the game. The love of the drama, fostered in his school days at Clongowes, when he was looked upon as the crack performer in their Shakespearean productions, has never left him, and, when in London, it duties permit it, is an enthusiastic first-nighter.
Wounded in Political Duel.
 Vienna, Austria.—A political duel, fought with swords, took place in Vienna between Dr. Stoelzel, a German student named Wagner, who had passed unfavorable criticisms in public upon Dr. Stoelzel's political activity. In the sixth bout Herr Wagner was slightly wounded in the arm and face. Dr. Stoelzel was untouched.
 Douglass Belts of Pilot Rock, returned home this morning after transacting business in Pendleton over night.

HAS HELD MANY OFFICES.

Lord Kitchener Has Been Shunned About by Politicians.
 London.—Few men have been shunned about in public offices as a result of politics in the same degree that has fallen to the lot of Lord Kitchener. It has been the ambition of the famous soldier for years to become chief of the imperial general staff and now, after many trials and disappointments, that high office looks to be nearly in his grasp.
 It is not at all unlikely that General Sir Neville Lytton, G. C. B., commander in chief of the forces in Ireland, may desire to retire at an early date and that his successor may be General Sir William Nicholson, G. C. B., chief of imperial gual general staff. Should these chances take place the way would be clear for the appointment of Lord Kitchener to the office he could so ably fill and has so long sought.
 Speaking of Lord Kitchener, the famous soldier is an enthusiastic gardener. Recently when he was looking about for a house near London he specified that it must be surrounded by fields so that he could raise practically all the vegetables necessary for the household.
 In Calcutta when Lord Kitchener was stationed there, he could be seen at work in his garden morning and evening.

AT THE PICTURE SHOWS

The Orpheum.
 1. The Midnight Cupid. Biograph, 1000 feet. In which a tramp is the central figure around which is woven an interesting love story.
 2. His Child's Captive. A Lubin drama. This is another of those pictures showing the powerful influence of the innocent little child.
 3. Caesar in Egypt. Pathe. An Egyptian scene representing an event in the life of Caesar. The principal feature is a marvelous reproduction of the burning of the palace.
 4. Love Me Like I Like to Be Loved.
The Pastime.
 New program for Tuesday as follows:
 The Purgation—Biograph, drama, 1000 feet. In this Biograph subject is shown the moral influence of love over an unfortunate misguided youth.
 A Honeymoon for Three—Essany, comedy, 1000 feet. This is one of the classiest comedies, with a hearty laugh in every foot.
 White Fawn's Daughter—dramatic, 1000 feet. A most exciting and thrilling story of a very interesting character.
Estray Notice.
 Strayed—From my ranch at Holdman, Ore. July 9, one brown mare 5 years old with roached mane. Branded J. T. on right shoulder and 87 on left shoulder, a liberal reward will be given for any information as to her whereabouts. Write J. T. Thorn, Holdman, Ore.
Attention, Daphne Circle.
 During my absence from the city, the collection of circle lodge dues will be attended to by Mrs. S. J. McBrian at her home or at the cigar store on Main street.
 MRS. ALICE O'DANIEL, Clerk of Daphne Circle.
