FACTS FOR FARMERS

Raise More Market Poultry.

It has been asked, will the fancy eventually be driven to the wall by the progress made in growing market poultry? Certainly not. We need fanciers—real fanciers. We want men to create breeds and to perfect the old ones. But the speculator and huckster is fast seeing his finish.

The man with a string of broods is not a fancier. He is a speculator. It would be next to impossible for him to give each of these breeds his best attention. To thoroughly know a breed and to get out of it all that is good in it would require an ordinary lifetime.

Amateur fanciers will often buy culls from a breed well advertised and then advertise eggs for hatching from so and so's strain. The man is a worse enemy of the fancier than the man who breeds dunghill fowls.

A wonderful interest has sprung up in poultry matters. Large sums of money are being invested, and poultry farms by the score are started.

These new farms are on the lookout for utility stock. The man who can advertise big egg records generally gets the trade. They want carcasses and egg records—business poultry.

So the best advice to the beginner is to join the utility ranks and raise poultry and eggs for market. Then, in after years, he can, if he feels so inclined, gradually creep up into the fancier's fold. It is a step that cannot be hastily taken.—Michael K. Boyer.

The Care of Horses.

Every stockman knows how inconvenient a stiff new rope halter can be. New rope may be made as pliable as old if it is boiled, by simply boiling it for two hours in water. Then hang it in a warm room and let it dry out thoroughly.

Sometimes a feed of cabbage just before using a horse that slobbers from eating clover will prevent the unpleasant loss of saliva.

On the appearance of any lump about the legs of a horse, it should be bathed diligently with water as hot as can be borne. What might develop into a spavin may sometimes in this way be checked at the start.

For lice on horses, take half a pint of kerosene in two gallons of water, and wash the horse with this twice, with an interval of two or three days between the applications.

To cure mange rub on oil of tar one ounce and whale oil two ounces or one-half pound each of tar and sulphur, and one pound each of soap and alcohol.

In all cases boil all blankets and treat with a strong solution of caustic potash all woodwork, harness, brushes, combs and whatever can be affected with the germs.

To cure a horse of the habit of pawing fasten a short piece of log chain—say five or six links—by means of a light strap to his leg, just above the knee—in the stable of course—and see how quickly he will leave off the habit.

Selecting a Brooder.

In buying a brooder, the chief points to be observed are: A good lamp, a heating device giving off the heat from a central drum, and an arrangement which facilitates easy cleaning.

The brooder should be large, having not less than nine square feet of floor space. The work demanded of a brooder is not as exacting as with an incubator. The heat and circulation of air may vary a little without damage, but they must not fall altogether.

The greatest trouble with brooders in operation is the uncertainty of the lamp. The brooder lamp should have sufficient oil capacity and a large wick.

Brooder lamps are often exposed to the wind, and, if cheaply constructed or poorly enclosed, the result will be a chilled brood of chicks, or perhaps a fire.

The chief thing sought in the internal arrangements of a brooder is a provision to keep the chicks from piling up and smothering each other as they crowd toward the source of heat.

Breaking Up the Broodies.

It is natural for hens of the sitting breeds to become broody after she has finished laying a "clutch" of eggs. They do not deserve to be ducked or otherwise abused because they follow the course nature has laid down for them.

If the hen begins to show signs of broodiness and is not needed for hatching it is very easy to break her up. If immediate action is taken, shutting her in a box with a slatted bottom, the box being supported a foot from the ground, will usually cure her in a day or two.

The slatted bottom furnishes a perfectly easy place for the hen to stand or sit but is not conducive to the kind of sitting that comes with the fever of broodiness. Broodiness is a sort of fever and the slatted bottom of the box allows the air to circulate under the hen and soon cools the fever and the hen is ready to go to work sooner.

It is doubtful if rearing a brood of chickens decreases the egg record of a hen in any way. If the hen becomes broody she will waste a lot of time if allowed to sit around until she gets ready to quit, but if she is broken up at once it is doubtful if she will begin laying again any sooner than she would if she had been allowed to hatch and rear a brood of chicks.

Deep Furrows.

Isn't it a shame that the wheat lands of this country produce an average of only about 12 bushels per acre?

The man who sells his calves for veal and his young steer for his own people to breed is robbing his own family.

The girl who has learned to make good bread will bring to her husband an accomplishment more valuable than the girl who has learned to play classical music on the piano.

You can breed the rubbins out of the corn just as easy as you can breed the scrap cows out of the dairy herd. We have seen millers in Illinois dump the bran into the creek because nobody wanted to buy it. But that was thirty years ago—they don't do it now.

The gasoline engine, valuable as it is, will never entirely take the place of really good horses on the farm or anywhere else.

The hired man who shirks or dodges his work to save a backache will never be anything but a hired man.

It is not good policy to keep a boy on the farm if he has the ability to earn the wages of a dozen hired men in the city. Let him go.

If your best brown mare is worth $200 to the man over in the next township you may be sure she is worth more than that to you—keep her. Fort Worth Citizen-Star.

KILLED ON EVE OF WEDDING.

Alpine Guide Had Promised Bride Trip Would Be Last One.

Geneva, Switzerland.—A pathetic Alpine tragedy happened on Sunday on the Jallouvre mountain, 7000 feet high, which is situated in Geneva, in Savoy. Emile Husar, a young Pole residing in Geneva, and a good climber, promised his fiancée that this would be his last climb, as his marriage was arranged for the morrow. His fiancée objected to his climbing, but Husar was enthusiastic and attempted to climb the sheer unknown peak of Jallouvre. He fell 700 feet and was killed.

Members of the Alpine club transported his corpse to a hut, which they buried in Alpine flowers. The body was carried down to Geneva on Monday.

Weigh Yourself Before Using.

Weigh yourself before commencing to use Samose, the great flesh forming food. The wonderful sale on this preparation since first introduced in Pendleton and the remarkable results following its use have made Koepfens such enthusiastic believers in the great value of Samose that they have given their personal guarantee to refund the money if Samose will not make thin people fat and restore strength and health to those who use it.

This is a strong guarantee, but Koepfens have seen so many of their customers who a few weeks ago looked like walking skeletons become plump and well solely through the use of Samose that they feel they cannot say too much to induce people to try it.

This marvelous flesh-forming food is assimilated as soon as it is taken into the stomach, makes good rich blood, tones up the weakened system, helps to assimilate the food and makes the user plump, well and rosy.

Poor Digestion?

CHICAGO WOMAN'S FAUX PAS.

Told Turkish Envoy in Berlin Russia Would Soon Get Constantinople.

Berlin.—Diplomatic society in Berlin is busily discussing the amazing faux pas recently committed by a prominent Chicago society woman and heiress to a colossal American fortune. She is visiting Berlin with her husband, who is conspicuously identified with great American industrial combines.

The couple arrived in Berlin with many influential introductions and a crop of exclusive invitations came to them in their fortnight's sojourn in the Kaiser's capital. Among their hosts was Osman Nizami Pasha, the Turkish ambassador at the German court, who entertained them at a dinner party.

After dinner, when the guests clustered around the ambassador over Turkish coffee and cigarettes, the Chicago woman, who has traveled much and prides herself on more than a passing acquaintance with international affairs, ventured on the thin ice of European politics. She laughed boldly into a discussion of the Turkish problem with Osman Ni-zami Pasha, who was presently flabbergasted with the observation:

"It's only a question of a few years before Constantinople will belong to Russia."

Osman is not only a diplomat, but a Young Turk patriot and soldier. His black eyes flashed in visible resentment at this humiliating suggestion. He remembered however, that he was the lady's host and at once the remark to pass without offering a controversial rejoinder. The subject, however, was immediately changed.

The Chicagoan's omniscient dip into foreign politics was heard by half a dozen others, including some Turks who were present. Through them the incident has leaked out and has caused some uncomplimentary references to the inexperience and tactlessness of American women even of the highest social rank when they venture to invade realms more pretentious than drawing-room small talk.

KITCHENER VISITS KILLARNEY

Says It Was 46 Years Since He Last Saw Lake Region. Dublin.—Lord Kitchener enjoyed his trip through the lower, middle and upper Lakes of Killarney immensely.

He stated it was 46 years since he had been in Killarney and he sincerely hoped to be able to visit it frequently in future. He was charmed with the scenery and the weather was ideal. His lordship added his signature to the distinguished roll already hung up in the lounge of the Royal Victoria hotel, and, by special permission he was photographed before leaving Doreen, the residence of the Marquis of Landsdowne, en route to Cork via Glengarriff.

Proprietary Medicines Prescribed By Doctors.

Examination of the formulary departments of leading drug stores throughout the country has proved that a very large percentage of the prescriptions filled for doctors are for proprietary medicines.

This is because the average doctor of today is unable to devise prescriptions equally as efficacious.

Such standard remedies as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound are prescribed over and over again by fair-minded physicians throughout the country.
