MILLIONAIRE IN SEVENTIETH YEAR TAKES UP RACING

Paris.—Another American who is going in for expensive sport, racing, in Paris, is the aged Theodore Meyer, formerly collector of the Port of New York, also comptroller. Since the death of his wife, son and daughter, Mr. Meyer, who is over 70 years old, has been living in Paris, where he is one of the prominent figures on the race tracks, in fashionable restaurants and other resorts.

His daughter-in-law and young granddaughter, the only remaining members of his family, occasionally visit him, but he refuses to return to New York. He tells his friends: "Paris is the only city in the world. I have renewed my youth here."

Mr. Meyer's racing adviser is Miss Estella Radford of Boston and one of the most brilliant American women in Europe. She is said to have more jewels than any of the famous Parisians. Her appearance on the track flaked with diamonds is one of the sensations of the racing season.

Big Stable His Aim.

Acting on her advice, the former collector of the Port of New York has decided to get together a lot of horses. "Paris Sport," the racing paper, states that he has already formed the nucleus of what promises to be a successful stable.

WILL DESIGN NEW COINS.

Australian Sculptor Wins Honors in England.

London.—It is announced that Bertram Mackennal, A. R. A., has been chosen to design and model the new coinage and coronation medal, which will be struck off next year in commemoration to King George's accession. The appointment has a special fitness from the fact that Mr. Mackennal was the first artist from the overseas dominions to secure election to the royal academy. But, apart from sentiment, he has justified his medals, which he executed for the Olympic games of 1909.

The son of an Australian sculptor, Mr. Mackennal was born in Melbourne in 1863, and coming to Europe in early manhood, studied for some years in Paris. His name first came into public notice through the controversy aroused by his life-size nude of "Circe" which was exhibited at the royal academy in the '90s. In the opinion of the hanging committee the base of the statue was too realistic for exhibition at Burlington house, and that was discreetly covered. The "Circe" was shown at the Franco-British exhibition three years ago, without drapery. After executing several memorial statues of Queen Victoria, one of which was erected at Blackburn, Mr. Mackennal received two important London commissions—the South African war memorial at Islington and the pedimental group for the offices of the local government board.

In 1907, the artist's "Earth and the Elements" was purchased for the nation under the terms of the Chantry bequest, and in the following year he was even more fortunate, the same trustees purchasing for $5000 his life-sized marble "Diana Wounded," now in the large sculpture hall at the Tate gallery. In the present academy the Australian sculptor is represented by a beautiful statuette, "The Mother." In addition to the new coinage and the coronation medal Mr. Mackennal is also engaged upon the statuary which is to decorate the St. Paul's cross, now being put in the Cathedral gardens. The late Mr. H. C. Richards K. C., left $25,000 in his will for the rebuilding of St. Paul's cross. After prolonged discussion Mr. Blomfield, the architect, was commissioned to design a Doric column to be set up on the northeastern side of the cathedral, the "preaching" platform being enclosed by a balustrade wall of Portland stone and black marble. Mr. Mackennal has modelled four cherubs for the base, and is also designing and modelling the bronze figure of St. Paul, which is to surmount the column. It may be said, in brief, that none of the younger British sculptors can claim a more varied experience in public and private work than Mr. Mackennal.

APPLE YIELD.

Estimated Washington Orchards Will Turn Out 3 1-2 Million Boxes.

Spokane, Wash.—Commercial orchardists in Washington estimate the apple crop in this state this season will be between 2,400,000 and 2,500,000 boxes, or about 6,500 cars, the bulk of which will go to New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Paul and other points in eastern, central and southern states. Export shipments will also be larger than ever before.

Though there is every promise that the yield will be the best ever harvested in Washington, owing to climatic conditions and the fact that hundreds of thousands of trees are coming into bearing this season, growers and handlers say there will be no cheap apples next fall and winter. The orchardists are in position, financial and otherwise, to hold a big percentage of the crop and many will take advantage of the market, because of the curtailed production in the central states, by holding their fruit not already contracted for until top notch prices are reached.

F. A. Huntley, state horticultural commissioner, after comparing reports from deputies in various parts of the state, says there is every reason to believe the crop this season will be more than double that of 1907 when 1,425,000 boxes were shipped out of the state, while other conservative estimates show the yield will be from 125 and 150 per cent larger than any yet boxed. There are many growers who believe the crop will go above 5,250,000 boxes, or more than 7,250 cars, including fruit to be consigned to local markets.

Buyers for New York, Boston, Chicago and European houses have been active in the commercial apple districts the last 60 days and it is probable that 40 per cent of the crop has been sold at prices slightly higher than prevailed last season; but the growers in central Washington will hold many until around holiday time.
