NEWS AND GOSSIP OF OLD NEW YORK

New York, N. Y., July 30.—The month of August is usually too hot for the sovereign voter to get excited over political matters, but, notwithstanding, the spellbinders and literary lights of the Grand Old Party are going to try to liven things up. In the St. James building today a force of men are putting things in shape for the opening of the national headquarters of the republican congressional campaign committee. On Monday a force of clerks will take possession and the fight for the control of the next congress will be on. While headquarters will also be maintained in Washington and Chicago, New York will be the center of activity this year.

Constantinople has the reputation of being something of a dog-center, but it is unlikely that it can compare with New York in this respect. While there are no adequate figures on which to base an estimate of the canine population of Gotham, it is safe to say that no other city can equal it. Within the last year about 55,000 bowwows, homeless tramps and hoboes of dogdom, have been asphyxiated in this city, without causing any appreciable diminution of the number of canines roaming at large. With the arrival of the "mad dog" days, the humane officers are redoubling their efforts, and as many as 200 animals a day are sent to the dog heaven. Gas tanks render their passing from this vale of tears painless if not pleasant. If the new state automobile law, effective Monday, has the expected effect of walking in the big town will become less dangerous. Incompetent and reckless chauffeurs, by the operation of the law, are finding themselves minus an occupation and will have to engage in a "walk" of life gagement, when she will make an extended tour of the United States.

Deft pounders of the organ keys to the number of several hundreds will go out to Ocean Grove next week and take part in the national convention of organists. Mme. Schumann-Heink will open the convention on Tuesday with a song recital, and on Saturday next Mme. Bernice Pasquall, Dalton-Baker and other Metropolitan Opera songbirds will be heard in a concert. Speaking of singers, the members of the Arion society are preparing today for one of the most ambitious trips ever taken by an organization of warblers. The party will leave this city Tuesday next with the Yellowstone National Park as their destination.

Brazil, which is a little South American republic about the size of the United States, will get some free advertising next week, when Hermes Fronseca, the president-elect of that nation, arrives in New York on an extensive tour of the world. The Brazilian dignitary sailed from England today on the Mauretania, and is due here next Friday. After his reception here, he will go to Beverly to meet President Taft, thence to Valley Forge, Pa., for an interview with Secretary Knox and will then visit Philadelphia, Washington, Boston, Pittsburgh, Chicago and other cities before sailing for home on September 2.

Lieut. Frederick E. Humphreys, of the engineer corps, who is now in New York on leave of absence, will go on the retired list of the army next Monday. He was one of Wilbur Wright's pupils in the aeroplane tests last fall and became enamored of the flying game. Since his duties did not permit him to follow his chosen vocation, he decided to quit the army and devote his future to experiments in aerial navigation. He is one of the wealthiest officers in the service and has sufficient money to carry on any experiments he may undertake.

MYSTERIOUS PAIR ARE CRIPPEN AND MME. LENEVE

wireless operator, knew that the two were Dr. Crippen and his girl companion.

The service rendered by newspapers in England and America in publishing accounts of the disappearance with descriptions and pictures of Dr. Crippen and Mme. Leneve are recognized as the principal factor in the arrests while the usefulness of the wireless is not underestimated. When Inspector Dew boarded the Montrose at first he was uncertain the man was Crippen as the suspect had shaved his broad moustache.

Woman Is Wreck.
Mme. Leneve is a nervous wreck and efforts are being made to persuade her to incriminate Crippen. Inspector Dew who identified the couple is not satisfied with the security of the cells and ordered them transferred to dungeons in the parliament building. Crippen was talkative on the river journey but became sullen and silent after he was imprisoned. The girl wrung her hands, moaned and rolled on the floor cell and did not sleep during and following the arrest aboard the Montrose at Father Point. She was a pitiable sight and it was with difficulty the police persuaded her to land while the thousand were watching. She refused to enter the automobile and was removed to the parliament building in a cab. The girl was astounded when she learned she and Crippen were accused of murder, and entirely forgetting she was playing a boy, fainted when Chief McCarthy of Quebec arrested her. When searched she was wearing a canvas harness to conceal her figure, a soft shirt and loose trousers and cap. Her hair was short and parted in the middle. Everybody aboard knew she was not a boy but none suspected she was Mme. Leneve. After her arrest she was given a loose gown and led down the gang plank, but fainted when she reached the prison. Inspector Dew expressed the belief the woman was not a participant in the alleged murder. According to British law, suspects may not be questioned except perfunctorily regarding the crime of which they are accused and they are warned that anything they may say will be used against them. This does not prevent Mme. Leneve from turning King's evidence if done of her own free will. Dew believes Crippen has kept her ignorant of the charges against them.

Crippen wore a canvas belt containing several women's diamond rings, ear rings and stickpins.

Although the passengers did not recognize Crippen and his companion, and although the pair were unaware their identity was known to officers of the ship, the captain, mates and wireless operator knew them. Officer Mowatt claims the credit of being the first to arouse Captain Kendall's suspicion. None of the officers knew a reward was offered.

No revolvers were found on either. After Mme. Leneve had revived after the arrest she rushed to a porthole and threw what is believed was Crippen's revolver overboard. An envelope containing powder, found in Crippen's effects, prove to be analyzed.

IT is a mistake for any merchant to assure himself that his store is so well known that it doesn't require newspaper advertising—that trade will naturally drift his way anyhow. There isn't a store anywhere in the world that has so secure a footing as that—not a single store—and in any field sales can be increased by the right kind of newspaper advertising.

less perilous to pedestrians. Vice Chairman Henry Loudermeyer representative from New Jersey, will be in charge of the offices. It is now practically certain that the campaign will be fought out on a "stand pat" program, despite the wails of the insurgents to the general effect that that way lies ruin and a democratic congress.

New York will serve as a clearing house for literature—if the stuff sent out by campaign committees may legally be called that—and also for spellbinders. All of the Patrick Henrys, the Daniel Websters and the Robert Ingersolls of the country are flocking to town in the fond hope of finding a market for their silver-tongued eloquence.

Representative William McKinley, of Illinois, a millionaire trolley magnate, is in charge of the task of filling the republican barrel and it is rumored that he has already met with success. The New England mill interests are said to have come across handsomely and the New York representatives of the interests have not lagged behind. In the democratic camp, however, there is something resembling weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth and the campaign managers are not viewing the financial situation with any marked degree of optimism. So far, the democrats have no barrel, a very small keg serving to hold the collections.

Manufacturing money would seem to be a pleasing occupation, but Kingsbery Foster, superintendent of the assay office of the New York mint, has tired of the job and will leave it today. On Monday a new face will be seen at his desk, said counterpane belonging to Daniel Parish Kingsford. He is a native of New York, was educated in England, and has had a long business experience in New York.

Mlle. Polaire, who glories in the title of "the ugliest woman in the world," but who doesn't look it, will shake the dust of Gotham from her pedal extremities next week and return to her beloved Paris. She has made a decided hit in New York and her admirers will hear with pleasure that she contemplates a return enor morphine, or who may have any mental or physical infirmities which interfere with the proper management and control of automobiles, are under the ban of the new law.

A sham battle between American and European aeroplanes is one of the features now being arranged for the aviation tournament on Long Island next October. A committee of aviators and military tacticians are now working out the plans for the maneuvers.

Ankeny Breaks the Record.
All records for slow time between this city and Wenaha springs by auto, were broken last night by Nesmith Ankeny of the First National bank and Brooke Dickson of the Domestic laundry. They started from Wenaha springs at 7:30 last evening arriving in Pendleton at 4 o'clock this morning.

When one of the tires blew out after they had proceeded a considerable distance they thought little of the accident but when the performance was repeated soon after and then repeated again, the amusing side of the situation wore off. It was necessary for them to pull the tire off four times on the journey.

Carnival Was Attached.
The Empire Carnival company which played in this city last week is evidently in sore straits. Two attachment suits were filed Saturday afternoon and still a third was filed this morning on some of their paraphernalia which they were unable to get out of town. Only a part of the show was able to go to La Grande to fill the engagement there.

My young nephew was reading his lesson to me one day, when he suddenly exclaimed:
"I'm English!"
"Why, no, you're not," I answered. "I am not. My teacher said so," he replied.
"Your teacher meant that your forefathers were English," I said.
"Forefathers! Did I have four fathers, Auntie?"
A man that would blow his brains out hasn't any.
