

SOCIETY EVENTS

The society affair of the week was the linen shower given Monday night by the Misses Bertha Anger and Genevieve Clark for Miss Hazel Nolen, whose engagement to Mr. Charles Baxter of Boise, Idaho, was announced a few weeks ago. The scene of the shower was the Clark home on the high school hill and the rooms were prettily decorated for the occasion. In the parlor from the center of the ceiling an inverted Japanese parasol was suspended and the many beautiful linen gifts were laid therein. When the proper time had arrived Miss Nolen seated herself beneath the parasol and by pulling a cord, precipitated the profusion of presents in her lap. The young ladies were then ushered into the dining room where a dainty supper had been prepared. The room decorations were entirely in red. Festoons of hearts were draped from the chandelier to the corners of the table and streamers of other hearts were hung from the walls. The favors were especially tasteful, each place card bearing a small photograph of the bride-to-be in one corner. Those who were guests of Misses Anger and Clark are the Misses Hazel Nolen, Iva Hill, Sydney Sommerville, Mary Shea, Edna Storie, Nona Johnson, Edna Zimmerman, Edith Johnson, Norma Alloway Edna Thompson, Irene Shea, Gene Holten (Boise), Edna Whistler, Pauline La Fontaine, Gertrude Campbell, Gussie Sawtelle and Gertrude Jordan.

Miss Nell Whittemore who figures in the following interesting story taken from the front page of the Saturday Portland Oregonian is well known in Pendleton, having lived in and near this city nearly all her life.

Tillamook, Ore., Aug. 4.—Rev. D. M. Schrode was routed out of bed at 4 o'clock this morning by four Tillamook young persons who wanted to be married. They were dressed in khaki suits and came all prepared to start at once on a honeymoon trip up the Wilson river. The preacher dressed and as soon as possible made Miss Nellie Whittemore Mrs. John Aschin and Miss Jessie Mason Mrs. Albert Plank.

Fear of the hilarious send-off promised by their friends and a desire for an unconventional wedding are said to be the reasons for their course. Right after the ceremony the four left on the stage for the headwaters of the Wilson river, to be gone three or four weeks.

Mr. Aschin is deputy sheriff of Tillamook county. He came to Tillamook in 1901 and has made his way by hard work. Mr. Plank is foreman for the Alex. McNair Hardware company. He too, has ruled his own destiny and from a penniless boy is on the road to success. Both the young women are popular in Tillamook and all four will make their homes here when they return from their outing.

Miss Ida Boyd of Pendleton who has been visiting Mrs. H. P. Isaacs for the past ten days, returned to her home yesterday. Miss Boyd is the local representative of the American Woman's league in her home town, and is most enthusiastic over her work. Pendleton women, like those of Walla Walla, are working for a club house. They expect to see it a reality within another year.—Walla Walla Union.

The many friends of Mr. Dan P. Smythe will be glad to know that he continues to improve. His condition is now such that his brother, Mr. A. Smythe, was able to return to his home in Arlington on Friday. He is still being attended by his mother, Mrs. K. S. Smythe.

The Eugene Register society columns announce the engagement of Miss Mae Starbuck to Mr. Felix Moore. Both parties were for two years members of the faculty of the Columbia College Junior of Milton and last year taught in the Eugene high school.

Men and Poodles

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

When I say "don't spoil your sweetheart," I do not mean that you should not show her all the love and tenderness of which your heart is capable. I merely advise you not to act as though you were a trained dog ready to fetch and carry at her slightest whim.

It not only makes you appear a poor spirited thing, but it makes her selfish and exacting.

It makes people pity you and dislike her.

Incidentally, it makes the girl herself think less of you.

Don't allow your devotion to destroy your dignity and self-respect. You must remember that if you spoil her while you are engaged, you will have to keep it up after you are married.

If you don't there will be tears and reproaches and accusations of worn-out love, etc.

As far as you are concerned, it will probably be a case of ceasing to run after the car after you have caught it. You will be happy and content and still very much in love, but you won't be quite so keen on the fetch and carry business.

He Cannot Be a Slave.

The married man cannot be the slave of his wife and amount to anything in the world.

A selfish, exacting wife is a millstone round a man's neck, and a handicap in every sense of the word. The fact that he has made the situation will not lessen the burden. You can show your sweetheart every possible attention without becoming a slave to her whims.

Don't let her order you about as though you had no dignity nor will of your own.

It is a habit that will grow very quickly, and she won't be able to resist the temptation to display her power. And power of that sort is bad for a woman.

Respect Will Be Wanting.

She will not really love you unless she respects you, and she will not respect you if she feels that she can order you about like a tame poodle dog.

You must have a will of your own if you hope to hold a woman's love. Any woman would tell you just what I am telling you, for all women at some time of their lives have known men whom they knew they could dictate to.

I have seen people fairly boil with indignation over the demands made by a spoiled girl on the man who loved her.

And always they have ended by saying, "Oh, well, if he is such a poor spirited thing he deserves all he gets."

When a girl gets into the habit of changing her mind forty times about a thing, ordering a man to do this and do that, to go here and go there, it is high time the man putted himself together and made protest.

Hold her because she loves and respects you, not because she can order you about.

The "Home Grouch"

BY WINNIFRED BLACK.

A Cleveland woman brought suit for divorce against her husband the other day because he played solitaire so much that he not only had no time for work, but he had no time to pay her the least attention.

"I've seen him spend whole days playing solitaire," said the Cleveland woman in court, "and he would snap at me like a dog if I tried to speak one word to him."

I hope she got her divorce.

Of all demons that are hard to bear it seems to me the dumb demon is the worst. I'd rather a man would take an ax and break every window in the house, set fire to the garage and kick the cat out into the alley than to see him come home with what his office associates would call "a grouch."

I know a woman whose husband has a "home grouch"—or at least he did have.

On the street, at the office, in the restaurants, down at the club, who so gay, so debonaire, so good-humored, so easy-tempered as the man with the "home grouch?" But the instant that man set feet on the steps of his own home his face settled into a positively forbidding scowl, and he would spend a whole evening sulking because he didn't like something there was for dinner.

His wife used to cry about it at first. Then she stopped crying and began to laugh. She never had a "home grouch," so she had a lot of friends and the husband soon grew tired of sulking in the corner when he heard his wife laughing and singing out on the porch with a crowd of friendly neighbors.

The "home grouch" has changed his tune. And everybody is much happier.

Of course, no sensible woman expects a tired man to come home grinning from ear to ear, and thinking up funny stories for her especial benefit. Men have their moods as well as women, and a good wife will love her husband out of the blues without saying a word to him about it. But the "home grouch," the man who is too cowardly to vent his temper on another man downtown, and comes home and vents it on his helpless family, must go.

Let's try the remedy of a good laugh and some honest and wholesome letting alone for this variety of man.

ASTONISHING.

The late Goldwin Smith, from his Toronto library, sent forth many an encouraging word to struggling young men.

Prof. Smith knew how hard success was to obtain, and to a physician in Philadelphia he once wrote:

"Success, if you work hard, is sure to be yours in the end, though doubtless the thing that most astonishes the young physician is to find how difficult patients are to obtain and how easy to lose."
