SOME CAUSES OF SPAIN'S UPHEAVAL

SITUATION IS OUTGROWTH OF INCREASED DISSATISFACTION

More Economic Than Religious—The Church a Heavy Load to Carry-Monks Are Wealthy-Pay No Taxes and Monopolize Some Branches of Production.

Madrid .- The deadlock between the panish government and the vatican has many elements which are not generally understood outside of Spain. It would be an error to believe that in Spain the wish has been simply to establish religious liberty for the benefit of non-Catholic religious communities, as Senor Canalejas, the head of the Spanish government pre-His decree permitting non-Catholic churches to manifest their existence by exterior signs no doubt reestablishes a certain equality between the different confessions; but te real purpose is far more ambitious. What the leaders of the present campaign desire is to deal a mortal blow at the Roman church in the peninsu-

The fact is that Protestantism has never prospered in Spain. Be the cause what it may, in Spain there are no protestants, but Catholics and the enemies of all positive religions. standing face to face; and as in the peninsula liberals, conservatives, anarchists, Catholics and free thinkers are all equally fanatical, it follows that spiritual differences degenerate immediately into exaggeration and vielence. Hence the present conflict is not one between various creeds feling their way towards a kind of "Peace of Westphalia," but a war to the death between rationalism and the church of Rome,

Army of Catholics. Senor Canalejas and his supporters n the press are concealing their real intentions. They are negotiating with Rome for the modification of the Concordat of 1851, for a reduction of the number of authorized religious houses, and for a reduction in the budget of cult and clergy. They are bound to proceed thus not only out of respect for the constitution of 1876 but from motives of caution. Notwithstanding the activity and audacity of the rationalistic elements in Spain, the most casual observer will notice that their strength is as nothng compared with the compact mass of Catholics. There are regions, as Navarro, certain portions of the Basques Aragon, and Castalonia, where an army could be raised at short noce to defend the Romish church.

In this conflict Senor Canalejas would probably be beaten, were it not that the question has another aspect, the economic one, thanks to which the government has gained great measure of popular support in its campaign against the religious associations. It can not be denied that her church and her clergy cost Spain an exorbitant sum. In a budget of a little more than $200,000,000, of which half goes to the clergy is $8,-0.000 and this does not inch er large sums paid in fees. For the 49 provinces of the peninsula there 58 dioceses; there are 61 archbishops or bishops and some 21,000 canons and minor dignitaries.

Have All, Pay Nothing. The desire felt by the Spanish nation to be relieved of some part of this heavy annual charge of nearly $10,000,000 has contributed largely to the popularity of the radical government, but indignation at the privileges enjoyed by the religious communities is an even greater influence in its favor. These pay no territorial contribution. The magnificent properties of the monks pay no taxes whatever, and in consequence of this the Spanish citizen living in their neighborhood has to pay an exorbi-

Neither do these religious communities pay the industrial tax or the personal tax. At the same time their inmates are exempt from military service and from the redemption fee of $300 in lieu of military service which is exacted from other Spanish citizens. The result of this is that in certain towns of special industries he workers, especially the women an not live. The elaborate working n linen which formerly gave so much employment to the wives and daugh ters of the wage-earners has passed entirely into the hands of the con-

The single breasted coat is still in style for women, though young girls' models are displayed charming varieties of the double breasted effect. Among the latest designs from Paris, the hip appears narrower than ever, while the coats button in single breasted over the bust. This means that the front is shaped in such a way to give the decided double-breasted effect at the waistline. This is done with loops and covered buttons. They are not easy to cut, because they must preserve straight lines under the arms and the unwrinkled fronts, while at the same time they must be drawn around the walst and fastened.

As Dame Fashion counts much upon individuality in house dresses, one need not worry so much about autumn frocks yet a while, although it is ticklish business speculating upon feminine caprice.
