ROOSEVELT CONGRATULATES POINDEXTER ON ELECTION

Spokane, Sept. 16.—More proof of Colonel Roosevelt's interest in the welfare of Miles Poindexter, progressive republican nominee for the U. I assume as a matter of course that the decision at the primaries will be accepted as binding."

EARL OF MEATH HAS JOKE.

Philanthropic Nobleman Tells How to Avoid Collisions.
London.—As founder of the Hospital Saturday Fund, the Earl of Meath is looking with strong disfavor upon the Sunday entertainments that have been helping to swell the coffers of the hospitals. The earl is also active in other fields of pious endeavor. He is president of the Church Army, and is always trying to get first-hand knowledge of the lives of the poor.
An Irish landlord, his mansion in the Vale of Wicklow, Kildraddy, is renowned for its beauty. He makes a hospitable host. Among his house party not long ago was an American guest, who eloquently expounded the merits of American railroads to the disadvantage of Irish lines.
"Well," said the Earl of Meath, hiding a smile, "I know there is at least one railway in Ireland where collisions are absolutely impossible."
"Indeed," said the American, eagerly. "How is it done? What's the system?"
"Oh, you see," replied the earl, "the company has only one train."

The Orpheum.
1. Cowboy Chivalry. Lubin, 1000 ft. long. This is an unusual western story, strong, stirring, in every scene. Most of the action occurs in some exceptionally pretty localities. The story itself is strong and the care taken in the production brings out every point.
2. Ship Building of Toulon, France Urban. An industrial subject, representing all the important shipbuilding yards of this town in France.
3. Escape of the Royalists. Urban, 1000 ft. long.
4. The Affair of an Egg. Biograph, 1000 ft. long. A romantic country maiden writes a love message on an egg. The egg is served, and the young man before whom it is placed seeks the writer. He finds her a spinster of uncertain age. The reason—egg has been in cold storage for more than twenty-years.
5. Muggsy Becomes a Hero. Biograph. Poor Muggsy gets into trouble again but as usual comes out of it with flying colors.
Song. This Rose Brings My Heart to You.

THE PASTIME.

"The Turn of the Balance." Vitagraph drama. A society love story which will appeal to one with an irresistible force because it seems to reproduce a genuine heart interest.
"No Man's Land." Pathe drama. Mary had a little lover, who loved her well, but Mary had stern parents who refused to entertain his suit.
"The Return of Ta-Wa-Wa." Milles drama. A story of unusual interest. A description would fail to convey any impression of the scenery and the careful way in which this subject has been handled.
"No Rest For The Weary." comedy. A film which contains much of interest in the way of humorous suggestions.

Boy Wanted at Once.

Long Delayed Life of Beaconsfield to Be Issued.
London.—The long-overdue biography of the Earl of Beaconsfield is to see the light at last. The publication of the book had been so often announced and then postponed that people had almost come to the conclusion that it would never appear at all.
The work was first undertaken by the late Lord Rowton, who had been Beaconsfield's private secretary; but from one cause or another he never seemed to make any headway with it. After his death, however, W. F. Money-penny, formerly of the Times, was given the commission, and Mr. Murray now announces that the preparation of the life has reached a stage which justifies the publication of the first volume.
The life, of course, is based upon Lord Beaconsfield's private papers. The first volume will cover the period from Disraeli's birth, in 1804, to his entry into parliament in 1837. Mr. Murray hopes that the remaining volumes will follow at short and regular intervals. It is intended that simultaneously with the publication of the work in England an American edition will be issued in New York.
