THE APPLE KNOWN TO HISTORY AND MYTH

AGING OF FRUITS HAS ESTABLISHED ANTIQUITY

Peter F. Brill, Orchardist and Student of Apple Bibliography Tells of the Part the Fruit Has Played in the Past.

Spokane, Wash.—Whether the mystical Tree of Knowledge bore apples or figs or pomegranates is still an open question and one that may probably never be settled satisfactorily to the majority of the participants at a school house debate in the Spokane Valley, a few evenings ago. But while the three judges were unable to reach a decision, no one questioned the antiquity of the apple tree, the praises of which have been sung for ages by writers of prose and poetry.

Peter F. Brill, a practical orchardist and student of apple bibliography, spoke at length upon apple culture as a national industry, saying it contributed millions of dollars annually to the wealth of the country and the nations. He added among other things:

"We have the story of the Apple of Discord that figured in ancient Greece, and modern growers in America tell of the Apple of Prosperity. The Grecian story is that while the guests were seated at the banquet following the nuptials of Peleus and Thetis, Discord, angered because she had not been bidden to the feast, threw a golden apple, inscribed 'For the Fairest', in the midst of the merry-makers. Juno, Minerva and Venus each claimed it, and Jupiter, probably fearing Juno and to avoid embarrassing himself, appointed Paris to act as judge. Paris decided in favor of Venus, making Juno and Minerva his lasting enemies and by their machinations they brought about the Trojan war, with dire consequences to the Greeks.

"Another story, also from ancient sources, is that the most difficult of the Twelve Labors imposed upon Hercules by the decree of Juno, was the gathering of the golden apples from the Garden of the Hesperides, guarded by the sleepless dragon with a hundred heads.

"We are told that Atalanta lost her race because of an apple. She had many suitors, but to all she replied she would wed only the youth who could outstrip her in a foot race. If he failed death was the penalty. Hippomenes was the judge in one of these races. He believed the youths were foolish to take such odds, but on seeing Atalanta he changed his mind and entered the race. Before starting he besought Venus to assist him, and the goddess gave him three golden apples, and instructed him how to use them. The signal was given and as they were running he threw the apples one by one along the course. Atalanta did not stop for the first of the second, but the third was in her path and she stooped to pick it up. She lost the race but won a husband.

"In Norse mythology there is a story of a beautiful woman of the name of Idun, who represented immortal youth, and who had in her keeping a box of apples, which she guarded with great care. These wonderful apples had the power of restoring to youth and loveliness whoever tasted of them. The Scandinavian gods were not all immortal, and when they felt old age approaching, they went to Idun for some of her magic apples, and in this way kept young and beautiful forever. Idun could be generous with the fruit, for no matter how many she gave out, the same number always remained in the box, and as they were an instant cure for wrinkles, weariness and all infirmities of age, they were in great demand. Prince Ahmed's enchanted apples, mentioned in 'Arabian Nights,' also cured all ailments.

"Then we have the singing apple of the French fairy tale, the golden apples and the golden bird of the German stories, the apple poisoned on one side, with which the death of Snow-white and Red-rose is attempted by the wicked stepmother. The story of William Tell, shooting the apple from his son's head, used to be a classic but modern iconoclasts have torn that idol from its pedestal and tossed it on the top shelf, and were it not for Schiller's wonderful drama, it would pass into oblivion.

"The apple has also taken a prominent part in science. Voltaire is one of the authorities for the statement that seeing an apple fall from the tree to the ground, started a train of thought in the mind of Sir Isaac Newton and resulted in giving to the world the law of gravitation. The tree was shown in the garden at Woolsthorpe for many years. It was cut down in 1829. In the museum at Oxford there is a specimen of the apple represented with the apple at his feet.

"Many rites and ceremonies were associated with the apple tree in the olden days. One of these, the blessing of the tree, was observed in England as late as 1882. Between Christmas and the Twelfth day the farmer and his laborers, preceded by a trumpeter, marched to the orchard and forming in a circle around a tree sang and chanted in praise of the fruit. This ceremony was repeated until every tree had been encircled, after which the party enjoyed a feast and made merry at the farmer's house.

"The culture of apples in America began at an early day. There was in New England an old man who, in his desire to do something to benefit his fellow-men, collected apple cores and when the pioneers were beginning to settle the central western territories, he crossed the Alleghenies on foot, carrying a bag of apple seed on his shoulder. All he asked was permission to plant them without charge. 'Apple Seed John,' the only name by which he was known, tramped thousands of miles, and left behind him a monument which any rich man might envy. If that glorious vagrant could know that more than 10,000 carload of commercial apples would be harvested in Montana, Oregon, Idaho and Washington in 1910, and that more than 1,300,000 of the 26,000,000 barrels of apples grown annually in the United States and Canada are exported, his heart would sing with gladness.

"Dr. Samuel Bailey of Mt. Ayer, Iowa, has discovered that the craving for liquor can be eradicated from the human system by eating apples. He says there is a peculiar combination in the acid of an apple that allays the irritation, or so-called appetite, produced by the use of liquor, adding: 'I am also of the opinion that the keen appetite for tobacco is reduced by the use of apples.'

"The National Apple Growers' association, assembled in congress at St. Louis in 1906, voted unanimously to designate the third Tuesday in October as apple day, with the suggestion that the apple blossom be adopted as the national flower. The National Apple Show, Inc., organized in Spokane in 1908, has set aside the third week in November as the time to show the products of the orchards of America, and to stimulate interest and encourage perfection in growing. It offers prizes and premiums of a total value of $20,000 in competitions, which are free and open to the world.

LARGE SHOE FACTORY PROJECTED FOR SPOKANE
Spokane, Wash.—Hides from cattle raised in Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington will be tanned by a special electrical process, recently perfected by William P. Smith, and the leather manufactured into footwear in two large plants, employing from 500 to 1000 men and women to be erected in Spokane by E. H. Stanton, president of the E. H. Stanton Packing company, F. H. Burgess and Blinn Yates of Spokane, who have associated with them John D. Larkin, a millionaire soap manufacturer of Buffalo, N. Y., and G. L. Richards a capitalist, who was formerly mayor of Boston.

W. C. Gilmore, special representative of the eastern backers of the enterprises, who is here to confer with Mr. Stanton and his associates and arrange for the establishment of a tannery and shoe factories, announces that Spokane will be the distributing point for the northwestern and Pacific states, also the import city for hides from the western country, including the raw material supplied by local abattoirs. He added: "The two plants will be the largest of their kind west of the Mississippi river and will give employment to a large number of skilled workers. We have been assured that local capital will not be lacking. William P. Smith, originator of the new tanning process, is now on the way from London, England, to Spokane, and will be here early in October to perfect plans for the factories.

"Mr. Smith's process will convert raw hides into durable leather in a few hours, whereas the tan-bark method requires from five to seven months. There is practically no loss, while on second class hides, treated by the old process, this is often as high as 30 per cent. We expect to treat from 700 to 800 hides a day and manufacture most of them into shoes in Spokane."

Berlin.—The kaiser is greatly pleased over the cordial letters received from King George of England on the subject of the crown prince's coming visit to India.

The kaiser expressed his particular wish that his eldest son should not be received in India as crown prince of the German empire, but as some one who is to see and learn the greatest amount possible in the time at his disposal.

C. A. BARRETT

ATHENA, OREGON.

The only Direct Primary, and Anti-Assembly Republican Candidate for Joint Senator for Umatilla, Union and Morrow Counties.

PLATFORM

Honesty and efficiency in Public Officials.

Better system of improving the public highways. Peoples choice for Senator. Maintenance of the Direct Primary law and Statement No. 1.

The Primary is the Peoples' Convention. Why delegate this power to an ASSEMBLY where corporation influence and Machine methods are always present. The people should select their own Candidates through the DIRECT PRIMARY, and I believe the people are as competent to nominate as they are to elect the Candidate. Satisfy yourself as to the Platform and standing of the Legislative Candidate before casting your ballot, for every vote cast for an assembly legislative candidate is a vote to re-establish the MACHINE and CONVENTION SYSTEM. I ask the peoples' support at the Primary nominating election and promise if elected to work for the best interest of all the people to the best of my ability.

W. R. ELLIS

for return to Congress.

REPUBLICAN Candidate before the Direct Primary for Renomination—Saturday, September 24, 1910

Acts Speak Louder than Words:

During the past three winters at Washington Congressman Ellis has:

Secured appropriations for three fine federal buildings for Oregon cities.

Been honored by being placed on the ranking committee in the House of Representatives—Ways and Means. This is the first time Oregon has ever had a place on this great committee—with the influence it gives.

Been a consistent friend of the "Old Soldier," having supported every bill introduced in his behalf; secured passage of many private bills for very needy old veterans and their widows; and handled many hundreds of different claims for pensions which were acted on by the pension bureau.

The Second Oregon district stood at or near the head in the sums appropriated in the last House bill for its rivers and harbors. ($1,800,000).

Congressman Ellis has lived in the district over 26 years; he knows the people and what they want and need. He has been in Congress ten years, and gained an experience on the floor of the House and in the committee rooms and an acquaintance with the membership of Congress which puts him in a better position to satisfy the needs of Oregon than any new man would be for many years.

Regular Republican, Flat Salary Candidate for State Printer

OPPOSED TO PRESENT GRAFT SYSTEM

WILLIAM J. CLARKE

DEPUBLICAN, FLAT SALARY CANDIDATE FOR STATE PRINTER

Annual income of State Printer under present fee system, $30,000, would pay expenses of any two departments of State.

Printer's income much greater under new law which goes into effect in January, 1911.

Greater than combined salaries of Governor, Secretary of State, State Treasurer, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Bank Examiner and Attorney General.

William J. Clarke, only Republican, Flat Salary candidate for State Printer, would save $25,000 to the State annually which now goes into the pocket of the State Printer.

Has had over 30 years' successful experience in the printing and publishing business and a lifelong Republican.

Will the taxpayers vote to rob the State to enrich the individual? State printing office the last relic of the old fee system.
