LAUGHS OF MANY VARIETIES ISSUE FROM ANATOMIES OF WASHINGTON CELEBRITIES

Washington.—If as much depends upon a man's laugh, or his lack of laughter as has been asserted by a distinguished French scientist, President Taft, who is himself the father of a particular brand of uproarious mirth-sound, has an odd assortment of men whom he has placed in office to run the affairs of the executive end of the government.

When the president was secretary of war, the heavy mahogany doors of the war department were not sufficient to shut out the sound that issued forth despite these barriers when he saw something that struck him as funny. And he saw many things in this humorous light. He laughed more than than he has since although from the executive office there still issues forth now and then the echo of a great and sonorous laugh, a big man kind of laugh, bespeaking good digestion and good lungs.

It is doubtful whether President Taft has selected a single man who can duplicate his laugh or even come anywhere near it.

When Roosevelt was president he was no mean second in the matter of laughter to his secretary of war. It wasn't the sonorous, easy going complacent sort such as President Taft's but it had rare qualities. It had the effect of making everyone who heard it laugh too, or at least smile. It was exuberant, choppy, if you like; irregular, boyish at times, rising to a treble as if its creator was having the time of his life at the moment of its utterance. Many is the time that secretaries passing his door stopped to smile at his medley of merriment and it issued forth most often just at the time when one thought that the colonel was in his tightest corner, held at bay by his enemies.

Former Governor Guild of Massachusetts took occasion the other day before leaving for Mexico with the American delegation which is to attend the Centennial Celebration at Mexico City, to call upon Beekman Winthrop, assistant secretary of the navy. The result was a perfect flow of language. Guild has the mellow, club-fellow laugh. It is all of good humor, comfort, enjoyment of the moment. Winthrop's laugh is an utterly wild, unrestrained sort that ripples and splashes about as if the surgeon's cabinet didn't care a rap for anything and proposed to amuse himself as he chose. Winthrop has a hard time carrying on the traditions of the former administration.

Secretary Knox, President Taft's premier, likes a laugh now and then—but mostly then. The lips of the secretary of state seldom omit a ripple except when the moment is a most stimulating one. More frequently he sits and smiles, and his eyes do not laugh at all. They fix themselves on whomsoever is nearest as though the levity of the occasion were merely a bait to draw out the other person while the eyes scrutinized whatever secret of countenance might be unveiled by the flash of merriment.

Secretary of War Dickinson has a raucous sort of laugh although it is not especially distinctive. It is much the same as that of any big man who can take pleasure in a funny story but it does not always indicate a mirthful temperament.

Secretary of the Navy Meyer is not a man of mirth. His laugh is a quiet one such as would not cause any head to turn in the best ordered drawing-room, but he has the power of omitting it at the proper moment. He can lean back in his chair from the knottiest problem unwrinkle his forehead and give a mirthful, amiable, velvety little ripple which quite suits the occasion.

Uncle Jim Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, and "grand father of the cabinet," has a nice, well defined, western Iowa laugh when the idea strikes him. It is a very characteristic sort of unepithetous utterance. It comes forth unbidden by circumstance, is not very loud and depends entirely upon the secretary's inward state of being. He laughs when he pleases.

Attorney General Wickersham is far different from Bonaparte, his predecessor who often chuckled to himself whenever the popular voice happened to be lambasting him. It was a quiet confidential sort of chuckle, apparently not meant for other ears. Wickersham never laughs without conforming to the usages of the American Bar association and well defined rules of propriety and etiquette. He is full of funny stories, however, and laughs robustly on occasion.

Postmaster General Hitchcock has a useful smile but laughing is not one of his prominent characteristics. Abandonment to mirth is not in his makeup. He would never think of letting himself go to the extent of giving an ungraceful and reverberating whoop.

Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh has a keen sense of humor and enjoys telling stories as well as hearing the anecdotes of others. He indulges in pleasing little chuckles that indicate his pleasure in the point that has been made in the story but refrains, as a rule, from unrestrained hilarity.

Secretary Nagle of the department of Commerce and Labor has a purring laugh which much of the time is noncommittal and neutral. It is a good evidence of cheerfulness but at the same time, if he desires, it often leaves his hearers in doubt as to the depth of his mirth.

Secretary Ballinger of the Department of the Interior has a good-fellow laugh that is well known in the circles of his friends. It has been classified by some as a political laugh and at times has stood him in good stead, but it is never uproarious.

Taken as a whole the laughter of the present cabinet is more or less restraining and the president has but little competition when he gives way to mirth at a meeting of his executive council.

CZAR DENOUNCED IN GERMANY AS "DEMON"

Berlin.—The feature of the week's events in Germany has been the ferocious attack made on the Czar by socialists, democrats, radicals and liberals. A great demonstration, which was planned to take place in the vicinity of Friedberg Castle, where the Czar is staying, was postponed by the police, but within forty-eight hours the socialists held a meeting within five miles of Friedberg Castle without police permission.

The most violent speeches were delivered abusing the Czar. He was denounced as "a bloodthirsty tyrant," "a murderer," "the instigator of ruthless massacres," "demon" and by numerous other epithets. Similar denunciations have been made from platform at many meetings in South Germany. The Czar is regarded as the arch anti-semitic of Russia and this has caused the radicals and liberals to supplement the attacks of the socialists, all laying stress on the massacres and persecution of Jews in Russia.

The Czar during his stay in Germany has been the target for a series of absolutely unprecedented attacks such as never before were leveled at any European monarch. These attacks are embarrassing to the German government to a most serious degree because the relations between Germany and Russia were never friendly and because a different alignment of the powers is feared.

The Czar's personal resentment may be so aroused that German diplomacy may never be able to detach Russia from the Anglo-French entente and thus restore the ancient hold alliance. "The North German Gazette," the official organ of the German government, and other inspired newspapers have done their best to appease the Czar by publishing stern reprovals of the attacks showered on him. But there is a personal difference between the Kaiser and the Czar of long standing.

MUNICIPAL RAILWAYS.

American Consul at Belfast Says the Scheme Has Been Successful. Washington.—Reports from United States consuls in England and Ireland tell of the result of the operation of street railways under municipal control. Consul H. B. Miller at Belfast, says the street railroad system in that city was placed under the management of an expert whose administration has been remarkably successful. A popular feature of his management is the concentration of all lines through a general central station. "Another feature," Miller says, "is the variety of rates and arrangements designed especially to suit the general character of the city. Belfast has diversified industries, with vast numbers of men and women working in factories. Street cars are run at fixed hours night and morning to transport working men to and from their homes and workshops at two cents for any distance. The same rate has also lately been given to females up to 9 a. m. For both classes four cents buys a return ticket that will carry the holder back to any part of the city at any time on any car. These privileges have proved of great benefit to girls and women in various forms of employment. Children under 15 years of age travel at half fare.

"The regular fare on the street cars is two cents for the average distance of two miles and for the more extended lines the rate to the center of the city is four cents, or across the city, passing through the central station on any one line, four cents.

"Referring to accidents the manager says: "There have been two fatal accidents during the year. The ratio of fatalities to passengers was 1 in 23,173,795."

Birmingham originally constructed and leased tramways to private companies, reports Consul Albert Halstead. A majority of the lines reverted to the city in 1907 and are operated under municipal ownership. The other leases will expire in 1911.

The fares on the lines operated by the city were arranged on the plan of giving a maximum carriage of two miles for two cents. Workmen are transported to and from their work on certain lines a distance of 4 1-2 miles for two cents. As a rule a workman's return ticket costs about three cents, but to secure these reduced rates he must start before 8 a. m. But may return at any time during the same day.

Motormen start at 12 cents an hour for the first year and rise to 12 3-4 cents the third year; the latter is the maximum wage. Conductors start at 10 cents an hour, advancing to 12 cents the third year. Motormen and conductors are furnished uniforms. Motormen get $1.50 extra every three months when they have had no avoidable accident. Including uniforms and holidays paid for, it is calculated that the minimum wage of a motorman is about $7.60 and the maximum about $8.50 per week and for conductors about $8.10 is the minimum and about $7.90 the maximum.

Only a little cold in the head may be the beginning of an obstinate case of Nasal Catarrh. Drive out the invader with Ely's Cream Balm applied straight to the inflamed stuffed up air-passages. Price 50c. If you prefer to use an atomizer, ask for Liquid Cream Balm. It has all the good qualities of the solid form of this remedy and will rid you of catarrh or hay fever. No cocaine to breed a dreadful habit. No mercury to dry out the secretion. Price 75c, with spraying tube. All druggists, or mailed by Ely Bros., 56 Warren street, New York.

Fraud in Family Bible. London.—The already numerous duties which fall to the government laboratory have been added to since the passing of the old age pensions act.

In his annual report the principal chemist states that in consequence of suspected frauds by claimants of old pensions, entries in family Bibles, old letters and certificates were submitted to the laboratory to ascertain, if possible, the date of the entry. In some cases the laboratory was able to show from the nature of the ink employed that the writing was comparatively recent, and that the entry had been made for the purpose of producing evidence of age in order to secure the pension.

Repentance soon after green apples is no promise of a new life.
