

HERMISTON BEE MEN MAKE BIG PROFITS

APARISTS FIND PROJECT TO BE EXCELLENT FIELD

Honey Producing Industry Proves a Great Success on Account of Alfalfa Blooms—Several Engaged in It On Extensive Scale.

(Special Correspondence.) Hermiston, Ore., Oct. 6.—Aparists are finding that there is no better place in the northwest for bee raising and honey production than in the Hermiston country and especially on the lands embraced in the Umatilla United States government project. In order for the little workers to make the best grade honey, they must have plenty of flowers on which to work. The many acres of fine alfalfa supply them with the raw material and according to experts the bloom of this plant is the best known for producing honey. Sage brush bloom also makes an excellent quality of honey, but this supply is rapidly disappearing before the army of new settlers coming into the project. It being cleared off to make room for more profitable crops, like alfalfa and fruits.

One of the main things to be considered is that the bee can be handled without so much care. They tend to keep the orchards free from insects and help pollinate clover and alfalfa, and therefore increase the yield of seed, which is one of the coming industries of the west Umatilla district, the yield being exceedingly heavy.

Robert E. Thom and John Thom are the pioneer aparists of this district. Together they have something like 350 stands of bees and from them they will take this year eight tons of high grade honey. They say that their output could be increased materially by straining it, but so far they have made quite a reputation with the fine comb honey they produce. They are increasing the number of stands each year and find no trouble in getting a ready market for each season's crop at a fancy price.

George A. Cressy is a Wisconsin man who came to the project last spring, bringing his bees with him. He has followed this business for years and is thoroughly posted. On account of the long move this spring he did not expect a large crop of honey, and was greatly surprised when he found that from 70 stands he had taken nearly 6000 pounds of strained honey of the best quality. He says that he can ship to the same eastern markets as he formerly did and make more money from a stand than he could when he was within a few miles of the market.

Charles H. Crandall is another man who has quite a number of stands and reports large yields. The encouraging reports have gone out to all parts of the country and by next season there will be a great many more settlers engaged in this paying industry. Only a few days ago word was received from a man in Warren, Minnesota, that he was shipping to Hermiston and in his car would be 100 stands of bees.

The increase in production is explained by the extra long growing season, and the fact that here three and four crops of alfalfa can be had each year, against two and three in other districts. Farmers are now busy cutting the fourth crop and it is a good one.

S. A. Cobb of Portland is in Hermiston looking after his property interests.

J. E. Steiver is here from Moro, Oregon, looking for a good 20 acre tract of fruit and alfalfa land. He was here last winter and liked it so

After the full irrigation season there is still left 9000 acre feet of water. Yesterday morning the government durned the water out of the ditches and the gate in the reservoir showed the above amount still available for the project. For the coming irrigation season the reservoir will be filled to its full capacity for the first time.

HUGE RESERVOIR IN THE CASCADE RANGE

North Yakima, Wash.—Word has reached this place that the reclamation service has decided to raise the levee of Lake Kachess 35 feet to provide sufficient water for a high line ditch. Thirty-five feet in figures is one thing; thirty-five feet measured up the steep banks of Lake Kachess is quite another.

There is already a big dam at the end of the lake, through which the water has been locked into the river as needed. Since the high walls fall away here which elsewhere encircle the lake, the new dam must be a gigantic piece of engineering, rising 60 feet and running several hundred. Before construction can be done it will be necessary to drain the lake, and a crew of men is now at work on this drainage canal, which is to come in a little above the present outlet.

Lake Kachess on the crest of the Cascade mountains, is one of the sources of the Yakima river. Like Lake Keechelus, a few miles away, it is a natural storage basin with rock sides running sheer into the water. Unlike Lake Keechelus, it has no great watershed. The former receives each year from streams and snow six times as much water as is needed to keep it full. While there are numerous mountain brooks tumbling into Kachess and several fair sized streams there is little surplus. The plan, therefore, is to fill up Kachess with the surplus from Keechelus. This will require a 60 foot dam at the foot of the lake, toward which the reclamation service has already taken preparatory steps.

Lake Kachess, which will be wiped out with the high water, is an old Hudson's Bay company post, established upon the left bank of the Narrows, and of which only a few fallen logs and the stumps of trees mark the spot. The ruins of the two log huts show the location of the old fireplaces, and the buildings were evidently used until decay, by the trappers of a later date, who are still numerous in the hills about Kachess.

Gives Guide Big Sum. Paris.—Miss M. Stoll, a Philadelphia woman, has just accomplished what is regarded by Alpinists as one of the most difficult climbing exploits ever attempted.

Accompanied by a guide named Plaz Miss Stoll made a night ascent of the Winklerturn (8,185 feet), in South Tyrol, and after reaching the summit passed the rest of the night in scaling two neighboring peaks. The climbers arrived at the top of the Winklerturn, which is reached by a succession of rocky minarets at sharp angles, at 1 o'clock. Their lamp was soon visible to the watchers below.

It is said that the guide received $5,000 as payment for making the ascent.

ing off the preliminary tie in Australia, but as soon as the Australians were given the names of the team, they promptly withdrew their offer. The English team consisted of Captain Dixon, Arthur Lowe, son of Sir Francis Lowe of Birmingham, and T. M. Mavogordoto, who is of Greek origin. The Australians declared that these players are not of the first class and are not representatives of England.

Considerable indignation has been aroused here by the apathy of the best players, several of whom have refused point blank to contest the Davis Cup. When Beals Wright was playing over here at Wimbledon, he cordially invited the English players to visit America and play the preliminary tie over there, but the question of expense at once arose. America must play England before meeting Australia, and when the American players were invited to play off the tie in this country they very naturally also put forward the question of expense.

The British Lawn Tennis association has, therefore, been driven to open negotiations once more with America, and it is quite possible that the English team will go to Newport and play the preliminary tie there.

CZARINA NOT AIDED BY GERMAN BATHS

St. Petersburg.—The news which reaches St. Petersburg as to the condition of the czarina is not encouraging. The treatment at Bad Nauheim has not had any appreciable effect in improving her majesty's nerves.

The cause of her illness touches the greatest depths of tragedy in the lives of royal women. It is not for herself or for her husband that her worst fears have been entertained, but for her children. The hand that strikes at the ruler of all the Russias would not be likely to spare his heir even though the heir be but a little child, and the constant hideous fear that death in its most shocking and violent form may at any moment rob her of her boy—perchance of all her children—has been more than a constitutional naturally delicate could stand.

Such mental torture through months and years must surely be the nearest thing to hell on earth that any woman could suffer. Through weary days and sleepless nights the sword has hung suspended until at last the utterly wearied body has collapsed under the strain. That rest and care may in time bring increase of health and strength to this brave, but most unhappy, lady will be the wish of all who have a grain of sympathy in their composition. But those best acquainted with her condition do not believe any great improvement can be hoped.
