WILL LOG OFF DEAD

TIMBER OF RESERVES

Spokane, Wash.—Several billion feet of dead timber on national reserves and private holdings in northern Idaho, western Montana and eastern Washington and contiguous territory will be logged and manufactured into lumber to the exclusion of green trees in an effort to salvage as much as possible. This work will begin early this fall, giving employment to from 7,000 to 8,000 men for two years. It will not be necessary to enlarge the plants or build new ones.

The Western Pine Manufacturers' association, headed by J. P. McGoldrick of Spokane, adopted resolutions at its last meeting, which was called to consider the best means of dealing with the situation in the burned districts, urging sawmill owners and manufacturers to direct every effort to save the killed timber, also to assist the government and timber holders not owning mills in handling the products of the fire-swept forests.

It was decided to ask the government to appropriate funds for a more adequate patrol system in its forests, the money to be used in constructing trails and telephone lines. The association also urged the government to consider the advisability of training and employing federal troops for patrol work in the national reserves during the dangerous season, from May to October. The resolution closes with these words:

"The government and private concerns realize that if properly manufactured the market for our products is the whole United States and that every portion of this crop that comes but once in a life time should and can be preserved and utilized, but to make possible the proper and best use and the widest distribution of this resource, the most thorough and intelligent co-operation is necessary, as all the people are interested and each must do his share to make practical conservation a success."

SANITARY BARN.
New Course at Oregon Agricultural College Will Teach Boys to Build Right.

Corvallis, Ore.—How to plan and build dairy barns that are both sanitary and convenient will be taught this year at the Oregon agricultural college in a course in farm structures just introduced.

The students will learn how to design their own homes, barns, granaries, silos and other farm buildings; where to place them; how they should be constructed; and the cost of both materials and construction. An unusual feature of the instruction will be that which will aid students to draw plans in class for buildings solving special problems of their own farms, such as barns on hillsides or on low ground.

The various uses of concrete on the farm, with practical laboratory work in the making of concrete floors, walks and fence posts will also form a part of the students' instruction.

Problems in fencing, including the relative merit and cost of various sorts of materials and different designs will be an interesting part of the course, which will include as well a comparison of the efficiency of good and bad roads, and the methods of construction and maintenance of good roads in rural districts.

DECEASED FLY CAUSE

OF RAILWAY WRECK

Rockland, Maine.—A dead fly caused a head-on collision that injured 13 persons at Ballard park. This was the conclusion reached by Superintendent Valentine Chisholm, of the Rockland, Thomaston & Camden street railway, after examining the block signal that failed to operate.

Electrical connection had been prevented by a dead fly, which was found between the slate base and brass contact.

The freight train had taken the proper means for throwing on the light. On the other hand, the passenger car, having the right of way, was justified in proceeding when no cautionary light was shown.

Superintendent Chisholm's discovery ended the investigation.

TIES TO SAVE BOAT
AND NEARLY LOSES LIFE

Middletown, Ky.—A lantern set fire to leaking gasoline in a power boat belonging to Lawrence Brothers at Essex dock, and fearing the flames would spread to the dock some one set the craft adrift. Levi P. Miller, sighting the burning boat, rowed out to her in a skiff and while attempting to extinguish the blaze the skiff sank. As Miller could not swim, and the old Connecticut runs swift and deep at that point, he had to jump aboard the burning boat where was stored 20 gallons of gasoline.

Getting no response to calls for aid, Miller with desperation born of danger, began paddling with his hands, expecting any moment that the fire would reach the oil tank and cause an explosion. In this crude manner he reached shore.
