TAKES HOT SHOTS AT PROHIBITIONISTS

CLARENCE DARROW SPEAKS BEFORE LARGE AUDIENCE

Noted Labor Lawyer Makes Attack on Cause That Would Make Oregon Dry—Infringement on Personal Liberties, He Maintains.

Clarence Darrow, noted Chicago criminal lawyer, who won additional fame by defending Moyer, Heywood and Pettibone in one of the world's most famous murder trials, lectured in Pendleton last night in behalf of the movement to prevent Oregon being voted dry at the coming election. He spoke to a crowd which overflowed the Oregon theatre, filled the main floor, gallery, boxes, stage, isles and doorways. It was undoubtedly the largest audience of the present campaign.

Prior to the opening of the meeting the Round-up cowboy band discoursed music on the street and then played on the stage as the curtain went up. Attorney John P. Winter of this city acted as chairman of the evening and consumed but very little time in introducing the speaker. In his introductory remarks the local attorney called upon all citizens to make a thorough study of both sides of the Home Rule bill as well as the state wide prohibition question. He also called upon all the voters in the county to get their names registered before the books close next Monday.

No Statistics.

At the very opening of his remarks Mr. Darrow said he would not give any statistics for the reason that one could prove anything with statistics. He kept to his announced determination and figures were taboos throughout the course of his talk which lasted a good hour and a half. The speaker is a past master in the use of ridicule and with this weapon he kept his large audience in laughter during practically all the time he was speaking. Those who were disappointed in the first part of his lecture by the absence of oratory which they expected would be forthcoming were apparently satisfied with the closing paragraphs.

"When the Lord made the world he failed to ask the advice of the prohibitionists," declared the speaker. "He therefore left man free to do as he pleased. If he chooses to do right and live right, well and good and if he chooses to do wrong and goes to hell, why that also is well and good."

"The prohibitionists, however, would not only do and live right themselves but they would make their neighbors do the same thing even though it be necessary to kill him."

The speaker declared that the beneficial results of temperance in drinking as well as in eating is admitted by all, but he declared that there were two phases of the temperance question. One of those was to educate the individual so that he would be able to control himself while the other was to educate the individual so that he would be able to control someone else. The prohibitionists he held to be wise in that they got in first and want to do the ruling.

Darrow declared that he had no

Theatrical Dog Gets Left.
One member of the "The Girl, The Man and The Game" troupe has not yet arrived in this city where the play is to be given tonight. However he is not a member who appears before the footlights, so his absence will not mar the entertainment. "Bum," an Ayrdale dog, is the missing member and he inadvertently stepped off at Bingham Springs station as the train was passing that point this morning. Not until the train had gotten five miles this side of the station did Bob LeRoy, manager of the troupe, learn of his loss. He then began measures for rescuing "Bum" as the dog is a favorite with the manager and is also used for advertising purposes. Special instructions were given for the care of the dog and he will be brought here in train No. 17 this afternoon. According to LeRoy he would rather lose any member of his troupe in preference to "Bum." He came to the show in St. Louis many months ago and was adopted by the members of the troupe.

DISGRACEFUL ACT MARRIED MEETING

pleted his lecture and the hundreds of people who had listened to it were pouring from the exits when Dr. Parsons mounted a box and attempted to address the throng. The throng paused for an instant and then some one yelled "Let 'er buck!" The cry was immediately taken up by a hundred voices and the voice was immediately drowned in the bedlam.

Shouts of "He is pulling leather," "Pick him up," "Take him off" and other Roundup phrases were occasionally heard above the general uproar.

Finding he could not make himself heard, the minister appealed to those about him to start the song America, but the crowd refused to be diverted and they came back with "How Dry I Am." The prohibition campaign slogan of "Oregon Dry in 1910" was attempted by the band of persistent ministers with somewhat more success, but this was soon drowned out with the cry, "Let 'er buck!" chanted to the same tune.

It was about this stage of the proceedings that the hen fruit began to fly. One egg went sailing through the air dangerously near the speaker's head and struck a bystander on the outskirts of the crowd. A second missile was better aimed and struck the man who was attempting to speak just below the eye.

This caused the minister to temporarily cease his efforts but his place was taken by Dr. H. W. Foulkes, also of Portland, who met with no better success than did his predecessor. Other ministers also tried to speak, but each one in turn gave up in despair.

John Vert Accused.
John Vert, local capitalist, is the man accused of throwing the eggs. Among the other accusers is Rev. John Lininger, pastor of the local Presbyterian church, who says he was standing directly behind Vert and saw him throw the eggs. He says he said nothing when Vert threw the first egg but that when he threw the second one, he tapped Vert on the shoulder and told him not to do that. Vert is said to have told the minister to mind his own business, whereupon the minister replied, "I will mind your business in the morning."
