Wm. E. HANSCOM, THE JEWELERSTIMULANTS NOT NEEDED BY GIRLS

(By Beatrice Fairfax.)

The other day I was a guest at a woman's luncheon.

Of the six guests, four were girls of under 20.

"Would anyone like a cocktail?" asked the hostess.

The four girls accepted her invitation with alacrity.

Each had an excuse ready and one was "tired to death from a morning's shopping."

Another had indigestion and she thought a cocktail might cure it.

The third took it because she loves the cherry in it, and the fourth because the other three urged her to.

The two other guests refused. They had work to do and knew that cocktails and work don't go together.

The girl who took the cocktail because she was tired grew talkative and told something which she said had been confided to her as an absolute secret. "But I know none of you will repeat it," she said.

Naturally some one will repeat it, for a secret confided to six women is no longer a secret.

By this time the girl is probably heartily sorry for her betrayal of her friend's confidence.

Another one of the girls giggled a great deal and made herself and the rest of the party unpleasantly conspicuous.

Not one of the four was the modest, ladylike girl she had been before she took the cocktail.

They are all charming girls, and not one of them needed a stimulant to add to her charm in any way.

It is easy to get into the habit of taking a little drink because you don't feel well.

The effect of the stimulant lasts but a short time and after it has worn off you feel worse than ever.

And the worst of it is that the dose gradually grows larger, until some day you awaken to the horrid knowledge that you have grown dependent upon it.

If girls only knew the impression they create upon others when they take anything to drink they would never touch liquor in any shape or form.

Nothing ages one so quickly and nothing is so bad for the complexion as intoxicants.

Women feel the effects of drink much more quickly than men. Their nerves are more delicate, and consequently their constitutions are more easily undermined.

Half the time a girl takes a drink because she is with people who are taking one, and she does not like to refuse.

Remember this, girls, that the man who really loves you will never urge you to take a drink.

He will have too much regard for you to care to see your pure young lips defiled by liquor.—In Spokane-Inland Herald.

100,000,000 GERMS ONE PATIENT'S DOSE

London.—Four hundred million microbes are being carefully nursed and guarded in the laboratory at St. Bartholomew's hospital until they can be used as a cure for one of the patients.

The patient is suffering from a chronic empyema, an inflammation of the coverings of the lung, which has resulted in the formation of abscesses somewhere between the lungs and the encircling ribs. The disease first appeared seven years ago, and was apparently cured by an operation.

Since then, however, three fresh outbreaks have occurred in the same region, showing that the causative germs have never been thoroughly driven out of the system.

The microbes, under the cultivation, are the direct descendants of the germs collected from the lung secretions. The part they will play in effecting a permanent cure of the patient is explained by one of the bacteriologists at the laboratory thus:

"These germs were cultivated, and when we have grown the three kinds to practically the same microbe-strength the microbes will be killed by heating solutions and a dose of dead microbes, ten millions of each variety, will be injected into the tissues under the skin of the patient's arm. These dead microbes in the patient's body will lead to the formation of substances which will attack and kill the three varieties of live microbes causing the trouble in the lungs."

At intervals larger doses will be given until finally 10,000,000 germs can be injected at one time. This maximum dose, it is expected, will complete the rout of the destructive microbes in the patient's lungs and render the cure permanent.

No false pretense has marked the career of Ely's Cream Balm. Being entirely harmless, it is not responsible like the catarrh snuffs and powders, for minds shattered by cocaine.

The great virtue of Ely's Cream Balm is that it speedily and completely overcomes nasal catarrh and hay fever. Back of this statement is the testimony of thousands and a reputation of many years' success. All druggists, 50c, or mailed by Ely Bros., 56 Warren street, New York.

BESIEGE THE LORD MAYOR.

Mineral Water Concerns Overwhelm Him With Circulars and Samples.

London.—Sir T. Vezev Strong, who was elected Lord Mayor of London for the year beginning November 9th is declared to be the first teetotaler who ever held that office.

He has been greatly amused, it appears, by the sensation which the announcement of that fact made in the mineral waters trade. Already he has been overwhelmed with circulars and samples of non-intoxicating beverages.

"I never heard of most of them," he said in an interview, "and I shall certainly not poison my guests with these strange concoctions. Although a teetotaler, I am not a drinker of mineral waters. Tea and coffee are my principal beverages, and will continue to be so.

"I am not greatly attached to water and drink very little of it. It will not be difficult for me to go through city dinners as an abstainer. When I served in the office of Sheriff I went through all that."

SOME HELPFUL TIPS FOR YOUNG BRIDES

BY DOROTHY DIX.

Don't live in your emotions. Get down to earth as a daily abiding place. You won't get so many bumps if you do.

Don't sit with your fingers on your pulse, counting your heart throbs.

Don't narrow your interests down to one person so that if he fails you your world will be left empty and desolate.

Don't think that, because you would die for your husband, it gives you a right to nag and deprive him of his personal liberty.

Don't tag your husband and insist on going with him every time he leaves home. A man has just as much need of masculine society as a woman has of feminine.

Don't believe that any woman is as necessary to a man's happiness as he may be to hers. Men aren't built with that kind of nature.

Don't expect your husband to keep up the high pressure love-making of his courting days through forty years of dead-level matrimony.

Never worry about your husband's affections as long as he tells like a horse to make you comfortable. A breakfast is just as much a token of underlying devotion as a bunch of American Beauties.

Don't try to cut a man over after you marry him by your own paper pattern. His mother attended to that long before you ever saw him, and what he is he is. You married him on that basis. Accept it with good grace.

Don't put your reform theories to work on your husband. Try them out on the Zulus or the Hottentots.

Give your husband an evening out, and no questions asked every week. The poor, hard-worked domestic drudge deserves it.

And take one yourself. There are no people such dull company as those who know exactly the same things, who have seen the same things, and haven't even a new story to tell each other.

Play fair with your husband. Be as nice to his family and friends as you expect him to be to yours.

Don't set up your own standard of taste and morals and expect your husband to accept them. He has got just as much right to his opinion as you have to yours.

Don't be Madame Oracle. There is nothing else on earth so afflictive as to have to live with a perfect woman who knows it all.

Never correct your husband before company, no matter how big an error he makes. It's bad form and will inevitably make him hate you.

Cultivate a sense of humor. There are many things in married life at which we must laugh or weep, and the ability to see the funny side of things will keep you out of the divorce court.

Don't be a spoil-sport and raise a million objections to every plan your husband suggests for a little pleasure. The reason that most neglected wives are neglected is because they have first proved themselves wet blankets on every festive occasion.

Try to learn to be chummy with your husband, so that when the flare of the fire of passion dies out you will have the steady glow and warmth of friendship and comradeship to fall back upon, and will not be left, as so many couples are, with nothing.

Don't reveal the fact that your husband is not all your girlish fancy painted him. What would a perfect man want with you?—In San Francisco Examiner.

ASYLUM GRANT STOPPED.

Clonmel District Lunatic Asylum Stands to Lose $10,000 Yearly.

Dublin.—At a meeting of the committee of the Clonmel district lunatic asylum the residential medical superintendent reported that the partial stoppage of the capitation grant to the asylum would result in a loss of over $10,000 a year. The committee approved of a proposal to promote a conference of asylum representatives in Ireland to secure full payment of the grant.

The Kilkenny district asylum committee, who were informed that a sum of $7900 had been deducted from the grant in aid of pauper lunatics, requested the county council to take steps to secure the payment of the full grant.

The clerk to the Sligo and Leitrim asylum announced that there had been a total reduction of $10,415 in the grants. A resolution was passed asking the government to provide for the full payment of the grants.

The Gorey district council passed a resolution of protest when informed that the county would be affected to the extent of $14845 by reduction of the grants.

Mr. Walter Kavanaugh said that certain license duties had been earmarked to provide funds to assist local taxation in Ireland, but Mr. Lloyd George had put a tax upon spirits that had not only crushed out an industry of the country, but had reduced the revenue so much that it was now unable to produce funds for the grants in aid of local taxation. Was it fair that the rate-payers should pay for the ill-advised experiment made by the chancellor of the exchequer?

KING'S JOB NO SINECURE.

Flight of Manuel from Portugal Instance of Its Uncertainty.

Rome.—Three years prior to his assassination at Monza, the late King Humbert was attacked while driving to the Capannelle race course on the New Appian Way by a would-be assassin, armed with a sharpened rifle. When asked by a newspaper correspondent who came upon the scene immediately after the seizure of the would-be regicide, what had happened, King Humbert, with a grim humor, replied: "One of the little uncertainties incident to the profession of king!"

The grand-nephew of the unfortunate monarch, who was killed three years afterwards, might gather resignation in remembering these words, and console himself for the fate that left him sound in life and limb. King Manuel, late sovereign of Portugal, comes, on one side at least, of a race that made its way by processes much like those of the republicans who have now ousted him from the sovereignty of Portugal. His grandmother, Maria Pia, once queen of Portugal, and who now accompanies him in his flight, is a daughter of Victor Emmanuel II, born when that "first king of Italy" was Duke of Savoy. She bears the name "Pia" from the fact that Plux IX, at the request of Victor Emmanuel—this was in the year 1847—stood godfather by proxy to the young princess.

Manuel of Portugal might also console himself that another great-uncle of his—Amadeo, brother to King Humbert—was also a king for nearly two years in the neighboring land of Spain, and having governed that country so uniformly he was obliged to escape with his wife and new-born babe to avoid assassination. Thus Manuel is not striking out a new path in the history of modern kings.

LAW'S DELAYS TEDIIOUS.

Million-Dollar Suit Drifts Along for Months in England.

London.—It is a favorite comment of British papers that the law on this side moves more expeditiously than in America. It may be true of criminal cases, but England has just produced a sample civil suit that is hard to beat.

A concessionaire named Wyler, who was concerned with a man named Lewis in some concessions in Portuguese East Africa, contends that Lewis and his associates defrauded him of a million dollars. So he brought suit long ago and the case dribbled on for months.

Then this year it came up in London before Justice Phillimore and the plaintiff was awarded $325,000, after a trial of 33 days. After 14 days a juror was taken ill, then the judge became ill and a holiday was ordered. That holiday is not counted in the 33 days mentioned.

On the award being given an appeal was lodged and has just concluded. It took 18 days. Two lawyers talked for nine days each, and three judges did the same for an hour each. They reversed the award in the end.

So now it has gone for a final trial to the house of lords and next judgment is expected sometime about the middle of the month. The plaintiff's lawyer is today in the middle of a four-days' explanation of his client's position. Each day is costing about $2500 in lawyers' fees alone. All told, nearly $350,000 has been spent that way already.

Catarrh is an excessive secretion, accompanied with chronic inflammation, from the mucous membrane. Hood's Sarsaparilla acts on the mucous membrane through the blood, reduces inflammation, establishes healthy action, and radically cures all catarrh.
