POULTRY SHOW WILL BE HELD IN ARMORY

The poultry show which is to open in this city next week is to be held in the armory. This was the decision reached by the show management last evening after failing to induce Charles W. Brownfield to permit the show to be held in the Matlock-Brownfield building in the Bowman Hotel block. An effort was made to secure the Matlock-Brownfield location but Mr. Brownfield refused and declared he would not yield even though his refusal meant the death of the show. He refused to consider any proposition whatever.

The only possible objection to the quarters secured is the fact that the Armory is two blocks from Main street and is up stairs. For that reason hundreds of people will be denied the privilege of seeing one of the best exhibits of chickens ever seen on the coast. With the best men of the city rallying to the support of the enterprise, the show promises to be a success, to be a permanent affair and to grow bigger and better with each succeeding year.

HISTORIC BUILDINGS TO BE TORN DOWN

The old agency buildings which have stood for half a century, or more, on the Umatilla reservation and which have been going to pieces under the hands of vandals, were sold at auction yesterday by Major E. L. Swardlander and are to be torn down and moved away.

Among the buildings sold was the first church ever erected on the reservation. This was used for many years by the Catholics before the St. Andrews mission was established at its present location near the foot of the mountains.

The total sum brought the government by the sale of the structures was $260. They consisted of five houses and three sheds but owing to their great age and the fact that large portions of them had been removed by different persons, they were practically valueless. The highest price paid for a single building was $80.

Sam Bitner the well known reservation farmer purchased the greater part of the old lumber while other buyers were C. M. Wright and Charles Crowley.
