ANCIENT LAW SUIT AGAIN IN COURT

Washington.—Harking back nearly half a century and resurrecting relics of war times, United States Attorney Clarence R. Wilson has reopened a case which his father, Nathaniel Wilson, as Assistant United States Attorney, closed in 1869.

The quaint old case involves the distribution of a fund of $1,169.99 the proceeds from the sale of twenty-three horses and mules, which were seized as prizes of war on the Upper Tennessee river in 1863 by three federal vessels, the Lexington, the Robb and the Silver Lake, under command of Lieut. Com. Leroy Fitch. The animals were sold and the money was deposited in Cincinnati.

In 1869 the supreme court of the district decreed that the horses and mules, which had been owned by supporters of the confederacy, were lawful prizes of war, and directed that the proceeds from their sale be held by the Assistant Treasurer at Washington subject to further order of the court for distribution among the officers and crew of the three vessels as captors.

For thirty-five years the fund has been on deposit awaiting claimants, but none appeared. The new action is taken to straighten out the record and make final disposal of the fund.

WISH TO SEGREGATE THE UNSANITARY KISS

Safety Director Scott Small of Cincinnati and several city officials will go before the city board of health and seek to secure the passage of restrictions against kissing by certain people.

Director Small denies that he thinks it wrong for the healthy to kiss. Rather, he says he would encourage that sort of pastime, but he says that there are many diseases which are transmitted by kissing and that his object in going before the health board is to have people examined, and if they have these diseases to segregate them and keep them away from everybody else.

"I have gone into this matter carefully, and have talked with distinguished physicians," said Mr. Small. "I find that many of the diseases now prevalent are caused by kissing. If we can segregate these people we will greatly aid the city and will be making it a much better place to live in. Fully one-fourth of the people in hospitals today are there through sickness they have acquired by the unsanitary kiss."

NOTED SCIENTIST JOINS DRY FARMING MOVEMENT

The members of the Dry Farming congress will be glad to learn that one of America's leading scientific agriculturists, Dr. Liberty H. Bailey, director of the New York State College of Agriculture, in connection with Cornell University at Ithaca, New York, has joined the active working force of the International Dry Farming congress, and has accepted the appointment as executive committee man for New York state, recently tendered him by the board of governors of this congress.

In another issue of the Bulletin will appear a letter from Dr. Bailey, in which he discusses at some length the possibilities of the utilization of the same methods advocated by the dry farming congress in the rebuilding of the farm soils of the eastern states. It is very probable that Dr. Bailey will do much during the fiscal year to bring the dry farming congress movement into position of power, educationally and politically, in the eastern states.—Dry Farming Congress Bulletin.
