AT THE MOVING PICTURE SHOWS

The Orpheum.

Excellent program for Friday's change. 1. "His Sister-in-law." Biograph, 1000 feet long. Two orphan sisters, living with their aunt, are inseparable, and vow that come what will they will never part. The oldest, however, gets married and while the young couple insist upon the youngest living with them, she soon realizes she is in her brother-in-law's way, so she goes to her aunt to live and nothing can induce her to come back to the newlyweds until later, when there is a little niece for her to play with.

2. "The Law and the Man." Vitagraph, 1000 feet long. Thwarted in his efforts to bribe justice and defeat the law the moneyed scoundrel tries to kill the young lawyer who is opposing him. His dastardly plot fails and the young attorney appears in court at the neck of time, wins the favorable decision of the jury for his client and proves himself to be the man of honor and trust, not only in the law but in the marriage with his client's daughter.

3. "Little Snowdrop." Pathe, 1000 feet long. A magnificently colored production of Grimm's well known fairy tale, told in an interesting way. There is the abused stepdaughter and the wicked stepmother who desires to have her killed because the young woman is so beautiful she attracts more attention after the girl has been poisoned and revives her much to the discomfort of the wicked stepmother.

4. "Cupid's Pranks." Edison film, 1000 feet long.

Four thousand feet of the latest and best motion pictures in the above program.

Pastime Theatre.

The show of quality. The Pastime offers its patrons an exceptionally fine program for Friday and Saturday, featuring that old but never forgotten drama, "The County Fair." It is all there, just as it used to be when Neil Burgess played Aunt Abby so successfully and Tags rode Cold Molasses to victory and won the purse that paid off the mortgage on Aunt Abby's farm.

"Her Indian Mother," with its scenes laid in the Hudson Bay territory. This picture is another illustration of the call of the Indian blood in a half breed girl which was exerted even after she had been trained in the ways of civilization.

"The Light in the Window," this is a bright, brilliant and soothing drama of the most pleasing kind. Sacrificing her own love to care for her aged mother, Madge refuses to marry her lover and he goes to sea. Her mother dies, and she, ever hopeful of his return, keeps a light burning in the window. After many years he comes back and marries her.

"The Night Before Christmas." An Edison Christmas photoplay.

Four full reels, 4,000 ft. in 65 minutes, the shortest show.

At the Cosy.

"The Squaw and the Man." This film depicts a story of the Apache country and contains all the elements of a sensational and successful western drama. Features are abounding, such as Apache dances, which have hitherto never been seen in moving pictures, the dwellings of the Zuni Indians in New Mexico, which are likewise entirely new to moving picture audiences. The story in its entirety in fact is built around strange places, strange ways and stranger situations. The play is logical, photography superb and the action technically perfect. The trend of the tale unfolded in this is particularly appealing when it is considered that while women love more or less spasmodically, but the great silent depths of an Indian girl's love is one of the most impressive subjects of thrilling fiction.

"The Dispensation." A Reilance feature film. A drama of Great Interest.

"A Chosen Marksman." A comedy with a thousand laughs.

"The Spy." Another drama that will interest all.

"A Windy Day." A comedy that is full of laughs and will drive away the blues.
