AT THE MOVING PICTURE SHOWS

Orpheum Theatre

Good Programme for Sunday's Change
1. "Old Norris' Gal" Melica, 1000 feet long. Telling of a daughter's fight to rescue her father from the curse of drink, what happened when notice was served on the saloon keeper. How Gray a young lawyer interested himself in the girl's behalf and was captured by the gang, threatened with death if he did not give up the case, and how the sheriff and posse rescued him from the terrible situation. For thrilling situations and possibilities of good, this story is a strong photo play.

2. "John Dough and the Cherub. Selig, 1000 feet long. A delightful complicated fairy story with witches and elves, and fairies and prophecies galore, each appearing in unexpected places and performing unexpected stunts. Such a film is hard to describe since its peculiar attraction lies in actually seeing its surprising combinations.

3. "The Winning of Miss Langdon" Edison, 1000 feet long. From Richard Harding Davis' story "Peace Manoeuvres". An unusually bright story dealing with the state militia and played in light comedy up to the end, when it becomes serious. The hero, a man of fashion, who has not taken life any too seriously, has a desperate hand to hand fight with two ruffians and shows that when an emergency does come up he is equal to it.
4. "The Zulu's Heart." Biograph. Melodrama full of life.

5. "Poor Little Peg." Pathe comedy.

"Scenes in British India". The picture affords a good opportunity to acquire an impression of what the country and its people are like.

"Amateur Night." Detailing the misfortunes of a series of amateurs who supposed they had a chance to be called actors.

"The Life of a Cowboy." A western story, showing the cowboy in his native haunts.
