CROWDED HOUSE GREET'S BIG BENEFIT

THREE HOURS OF REAL ENJOYMENT FOR AUDIENCE

Number of Meritorious Specialties Introduced—Mrs. Landers and Mrs. Farnum Are Pleading.

It was a crowded house that greeted the entertainment given in the Oregon theater last night for the benefit of the building fund of the Catholic church and the audience was given the equivalent of the money paid at the box office in three hours of real enjoyment. Although the troupe of amateurs has been rehearsing less than a week, the different sketches were comparatively free from drags, credit for which must be given to Walter Farnum and his wife, who promoted and directed the whole.

A number of specialties of genuine merit were introduced during the evening and brought forth hearty response from the many people in attendance. Mrs. J. S. Landers appeared for a vocal selection and her clear soprano voice was never heard to better advantage. Perhaps the most artistic number on the program was the dramatic presentation of "The Spanish Bullfight" by Marion Ward Farnum. This lady is possessed of considerable talent and the ease with which she ran the whole gamut of emotions in the difficult pieces last night shows also long practice and study in dramatic work.

Eugene Mottor proved himself a popular favorite by the applause which greeted his vocal numbers, and James Weyer introduced a real Roundup flavor to the entertainment by his realistic interpretation of the well known cowboy tragedy "Lasca." Louis Cherrier was responsible for considerable laughter with his French-Canadian dialect monologue, and Mrs. Humphreys assisted materially in the continuity of the program.

The program proper was divided into the two farces, "The Balm of Gilead" and "His Little Joke." In the former which was composed of but a single act, there was much amusement caused by the entanglement in which two married couples got themselves. Miss Viola Shea made a distinct hit in her portrayal of the character of Mrs. Arthur Curdies and displayed considerable adaptability to the stage. Miss Evelyn Latourelle also manifested no little ability in her role of Mary Boyd. Frank Quinlan was the principal funmaker in this sketch while Walter Farnum, who filled in the part assigned to Dr. Idleman, came in for his share of the applause.

For real histrionic talent, the second sketch of the evening discovered a pair of real stars of the first magnitude in Joseph Scrabie and Jack Watson. The former was cast in a difficult part and the manner in which he assayed it bespeaks a natural aptitude for the footlights and an assured career should he ever decide to forsake his musty law books for the manuscripts of the professional thespian.

The appearance of Mr. Watson last night was not the first he has made before a local audience, but he added new jewels to his crown by his latest performance. With his inimitable Irish brogue, he proved himself a great favorite with the audience. Mrs. J. P. Winter, Miss Mary Shea and Miss Pansy Ireland took all of the ladies' parts in this sketch in a creditable manner, while Mr. Ferrington and Will Hemmeigarn looked after the remaining roles.

"THE CLIMAX."

Play Which Has Caused Sensation, Coming.

When the Bard of Avon declared "The play is the thing," that worthy gentleman knew whereof he spoke. Stars of the brightest ray have gone down to failure simply because the vehicle secured for them was weak. Plays with casts entirely unknown to fame have been huge successes solely on account of the merits of the piece. One of the most important examples of this fact is shown in the case of "The Climax," a play which has created a positive sensation on account of its purity and newness. "The Climax" is from the pen of an author, Edward Locke, heretofore unknown, and was presented by a company of players only one of whom had ever been heard of on "The Great White Way." These facts, bearing out the statement of the immortal Shakespeare, did not hinder the success of the play. On the opening night, the first performance was very lightly attended. Today all theatre-goers are from Missouri and have to be shown. The attendance started to grow after the first performance however, and kept on swelling at a rapid rate until nightly the capacity of the theatre at which the play appeared was tested.

"The Climax" is now in its seventh month at Weber's theatre in New York and seats are still on sale for weeks in advance and there are five companies on tour, all as good as the New York company, each doing the same phenomenal business as the one appearing in the Metropolis. This alone is a pretty good argument that "the play is the thing." Other cases of the same sort are cited in the case of "Paid in Full," "The Man of The Hour," and a dozen others which have romped on to success without a single player of note. It is a fact nevertheless that the play will make the actor. Unknown players have secured parts well suited to their talents and have become stars in a night. "The Climax" will be the attraction at the Oregon Tuesday, Jan. 31.
