"SOMETHING ON EVERYONE'S TONGUE"

EVANGELIST AROUSES CURIOSITY WITH SUBJECT

Habit of Making Excuses Declared to be as Old as Adam—"Do Not Make Excuses, Make Good" is Substance of Interesting Sermon.

Evangelist Lewtas' theme, "Something on Everyone's Tongue," caused some curiosity among those who had noticed it, as to what his text would be.

The text proved the accuracy of the theme for it was "I pray thee have me excused." He said: "Excuses are as old as Adam. Adam said: 'The woman thou gavest she gave me and I did eat.' Eve said: 'The serpent beguiled me and I did eat.' Doubtless the serpent said: 'It was my nature and I could not help myself.'"

"From that day to this men and women have been framing excuses.

"Our fathers ate sour grapes, therefore our teeth have been set on edge. The flippant excuses that men make for not doing their duty, for not turning to God, for not living the Christ life are appalling. Notice the parable of the great supper. Not a sermon, not a lecture. I do not blame people for staying away from some of them, but a feast. Who ever wanted to miss a banquet?"

"The first man, I have bought a piece of ground and must go and see it." The folly of buying land without seeing it.

"A lady wanted to sell me some lots not far from my home this winter. I said, 'Do you know those lots are under 12 feet of water at this time of year?' 'Not is that true?' 'Yes, it is.' 'Oh! what a mistake my husband made buying them before we came west.'"

"No man would go out at night to try a yoke of oxen. And any man with a new wife would be cruel to keep her away from a great banquet."

"Had he consulted her she would have said: 'Surely, just the chance to show my new clothes. And it will help me to get into society.'"

"Look at our excuses. 'First, there are some insincere people in the church, so I do not care to associate with them. They are everywhere. The lodges have them, but you join the lodges. The world is full of hypocrites yet you stay with the world. I take home a basket full of choice grapes. My boy of ten is delighted. I give him a bunch, presently he finds a rotten one. He lays the bunch down saying, 'There's one rotten, I don't want any more to do with them.' No he don't, he throws away the rotten one, eats the good ones and soon he is for another and another."

"Many people you call hypocrites are simply weak. They fall and what is the church for if it cannot help them up? I cannot hold out. That is true. None of us can. Only as God gives grace can we hold out. See the little child trying to learn to walk. It falls again and again, but at last it walks as well as I can. Why, I fell myself today, in one of your beautiful streets in the West end. I must say you have some fine sidewalks. Did I lay there in the mud? Not much."

Then he gave a vivid picture of Richard Coeur D'Leon sending his son to fight the French with the assurance that he was behind him with a reserve force. How to every appeal for help he answered, "Your father's eye is upon you," and how at the crucial moment the old warrior swept down upon the enemy with 5000 veterans and the French army was overwhelmed. If he would do that for his son, the Heavenly Father will keep you if you trust him.

"I am waiting for my friends." Oh, maybe your coming may bring them. Two boys 11 and 13 started in one of my meetings. They went home and said: "Mamma we started to live a Christian life, you do not object do you? Certainly not. And you will teach us how to pray and how to live."

That night a lady arose in the church related the incident and said: "You all know I have been absorbed in society. I don't know how to pray myself, but I want you to help me that I may help them." Don't wait on anyone. Come. His theme tonight will be: "A Great Decision."

LABOR NEWS AND NOTES.

Drastic legislation against alien labor is planned by congress.

The composers of London, England, are planning a national strike. They want shorter hours.

Trouble with unreliable employment agencies in the state of Washington, has started a movement to place on the statute books laws that will protect both the workman and the employer. Washington's laws will be patterned after those of the state of Minnesota.

The National Bartenders' Benevolent and Protective association will hold its convention in Boston in May of this year. It is reported that there will be a lively contest over the election of officers.

At the last annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America and the International Association of Steam and Hot Water Fitters and Helpers of America were suspended for failing to recognize the right of the department of buildings trades to define jurisdiction lines. This means a loss of about 225,000 members, and the money loss means about half the former income.

The barbers of California are working in favor of a measure before the legislature called the barbers' examination and license bill. The barbers declare large cities have been working in interior cities and towns for the success of the measure, which is in the form of a petition to the legislature signed by all the important unions of California.

The New Orleans Dock and Cotton Council, whose members have just been found guilty of conspiracy to interfere with foreign commerce by the United States circuit court, has a membership of 50,000. It was argued by the government's attorneys that when these men conspired to strike and tie up the port they interfered with commerce. Philip Pearse, former president of the local Coal Wheelers Union and U. S. Swan, former president of the Longshoremen's Union, who were among those found guilty, are negroes. From the moment a bale of cotton or load of lumber or any other through freight reaches the port or until it has been stored on a vessel it is not handled by any one except the members of the ten or more unions affiliated with the central body. The council will have the support of like unions if an appeal is taken.

On behalf of 250,000 employees, P. H. Morrissey of Chicago, president of the American Railroad Employees' and Investors association has presented a formal statement to the Interstate Commerce Commission in support of the proposed advance in freight rates by the railroads. Scores of petitions from branches of organized labor have been sent to the Commission advocating the increase. Says Morrissey: "In no other industry of our country is labor so largely employed as on the railway and none in which so large a proportion of its gross earnings goes directly to labor. Labor gets $1,005,349,958 from the railroads in 1909 and it is estimated that labor will get about $30,000,000 more when the increases for 1910 are added."

During a conference with Representative Hawley of Oregon, and Frank Ira White, representing the Klamath chamber of commerce, Secretary Ballinger yesterday stated unequivocally that the government would proceed with the construction of the Klamath irrigation project and carry it to completion with the probable exception of the marsh lands, which according to present plans will not be reclaimed by the government, says a special from Washington to a Portland paper.

Secretary Ballinger explained that the apportionment of reclamation fund as recommended by the army board of engineers, cannot stand, but that the funds must be used as needed, and he was positive in the assertion that there would be ample money to carry ahead work on the Klamath project until completed.

It is even possible that the government may build the upland unit of the project, which was abandoned a year ago, provided the land owners are willing to sign up and agree to repay the full cost of bringing water to their lands. To determine more accurately what the cost an acre of this unit will be, instructions have been issued to have the detailed surveys rushed, and when they are completed, the reclamation service will reopen negotiations with settlers on the uplands.

Messrs. Hawley and White are satisfied with their interview, for Secretary Ballinger's assurances were all they asked. The reclamation service today announced that its plans for 1911 contemplated the completion of a drain from the Lost river to the Klamath river, which is now under contract, the completion of the east branch of the canal system, and the extensions of canals to irrigate 9000 acres of Poe valley.

NAVAL ACCIDENTS ARE COMMANDING ATTENTION

Are there more accidents in the United States navy than in any other navies? Are the risks greater in service aboard the modern Dreadnaught than in machinery plants of equal size on shore?

These two questions have been placed before naval officers so persistently of late that they are determined to prove to the public the reliability and safety of battleship management by American naval officers.

The criticisms against the frequency of accidents in Uncle Sam's navy come from sources that demand consideration. Following the recent boiler explosion aboard the Dreadnaught Delaware in which nine men lost their lives, Representative Hobson, the expert of the house on naval matters, and formerly a United States naval constructor, said that the frequency of these accidents was due to the system prevailing in the American navy of requiring officers to do double duty, fighting as well as engineering, which prevented them from becoming expert in engineering or battleship management.

All Good Ones. Six of the best subjects that has appeared at any one house at the same time for many weeks was shown at the Orpheum last evening. The house was full to its seating capacity and every one was well pleased with the program which is exclusive motion pictures and runs 1 hour and 15 minutes without a stop. The pictures were so clear and steady one would imagine they were looking through a large window at nature itself instead of a life motion photograph.
