AT THE MOVING PICTURE SHOWS

Orpheum.
1. "His Master's Son." Essanay. The story of a slave's devotion. A powerful and intensely interesting dramatic photoplay by the Essanay eastern players. The prologue pictures the death of Colonel TenBrock and the vow of the faithful black servant to protect his "Young Marsie," the colonel's child of three. Later we see the boy grown to manhood and when imperiled by the loss of his fortune on the board of trade, through the jealousy of a rival in love, is saved by the old negro who gives his all to stem the tide. Rich in its settings, artistic in its photography, and excellently acted.

2. "A Simple Rustic Tale." Kosmik. The families of two rural neighbors furnish the material for this beautiful drama, the high spots of which are—a game of cards, a quarrel, parental objections to the wooing of the daughter by the son of the other neighbor, clandestine meetings of the lovers a mother's strategy and a happy reunion of all. Beautifully colored. If you desire a rare treat be sure to see this film.

3. "Will It Ever Come to This?" Lubin. A roasting burlesque on the new woman. Its about Mrs. and Mr. Sarah Brown and their family. One continuous scream.

4. "Easy Cole." Lubin. This little story shows that a quick wit is better than industry when a tired "son of rest" has a snow shoveling job. Also that it has its drawbacks when the victims "catch on."

5. "Sassed by a Waif." Pathe. An interesting drama. Don't miss this picture.

The Pastime.
"Her Brother's Crime." Kalem, 1000 feet. A love story with the scene laid in Florida and Cuba. The brother of a girl falls in love with her college chum. The scheming sister straightway begins a match in which she is successful. The scenery is exceptionally good, both Florida and Cuba being represented in the picture.

"The Battle at Redwood." A western drama by the American Pathe company, graphically portraying the attack of the Indians upon some white settlers. The thrills include an onset of Indians, a burning wagon train and other features typically western and wild enough to suit anyone. Not many films of recent production have been more exciting or interesting.

"Uncle's Birthday Gift." Edison, 1000 feet. An eccentric uncle sends his niece a birthday gift of a rubber plant in the pot of which is concealed a valuable necklace. The messenger loses the plant, and buys a fern. The uncle's note indicates something else and there is a hurry and scurry to get something to take its place. Ultimately the difficulty is settled and the niece gets her necklace.

"The Cricket on the Hearth." Biograph, 1000 feet. All four reels American production.

FORCE OF LIGHTNING.

An Ordinary Stroke Is About Equal to Fifty Thousand Horsepower.
Frequently surprise is expressed at the effect of a stroke of lightning which splinters a large tree or wrecks a tall chimney, but if the enormous power developed by an ordinary stroke of lightning is taken into consideration the wonder will be that the effect is so small.

Scientists estimate that an "ordinary" stroke of lightning is of 50,000 horsepower. That is force sufficient to drive the largest battleship ever built at top speed. The lightning stroke, however, travels at a speed of 180,000 miles per second. We think we see a flash of lightning, but as a matter of fact what we see is only the memory of a flash. The electrical current has been absorbed by the earth long before we are conscious of having seen the flash. A person struck by a direct flash would never see it.

The average electromotive force of a "bolt" of lightning is about 3,500,000 volts, and the current is 14,000,000 amperes. In such a "bolt" there is energy equal to 2,450,000 volts, or 3,284,182 horsepower. Some day a wizard will arise who will capture and bind a "bolt" of lightning and with it turn all the wheels of a great city.

The time required for the discharge of a "bolt" of lightning is about one twenty-thousandth of a second.—Chicago Tribune.

Nothing to Do.

The following bit, quoted from Lord Cromer by Helen Barrett Montgomery in her "Western Women in Eastern Lands," presents a picture of the monotony and deprivation of the life of the Egyptian lady that pages of statistics might fail to convey: The seduction of women exercises a most harmful influence on eastern society. This conclusion by confining the sphere of woman's interest to a very limited horizon cramps the intellect and withers the mental development of one-half the population of Moslem countries.

An Englishwoman once asked an Egyptian lady how she passed her time.

"I sit on this sofa," she replied, "and when I am tired I cross over and sit on that."

Wit Not Appreciated.

Stubbs was feeling his way to the kitchen stove in the dark when he fell over the coal scuttle.

"Oh, John," called Mrs. Stubbs sweetly, "I know what you need. You should get what they have on battleships."

"What's that?" growled Stubbs as he rubbed his shins.

"Why, a range fender."

And what Stubbs said about woman's wit was plenty.—New York American.

Women may possibly not know enough to vote, though we don't admit it; but she certainly knows enough not to sell her vote to the first brainer who may happen along.

The Force That Makes the Wheels Go 'Round

ADVERTISING is to business what electricity is to the city—light and power. It is at once a gentle force that makes things clear and an irresistible force that makes things go.

Advertising has sent the selling methods of the past generation to the scrapheap to keep company with the tallow dip and the horsecar. Founded on the most abstract of sciences, it concerns itself with the most concrete of facts. Wasteful and haphazard in its crude beginnings, it has revolutionized business because in its later development it has proved the most economical and efficient method of selling goods. Today manufacturers split pennies to find profits and split hairs to find costs. The old idea that an article is more expensive because it is advertised is exploded. As infallibly as water seeks the lowest possible level, modern business seeks the most economical method of marketing its products. An advertised article is cheaper than one which is sold to consumers by tallow-dip, horsecar methods.

It will pay the public to read the advertisements carefully—to patronize institutions that advertise, they represent the progressive element of today.

The store that advertises an article is the store that carries the goods that will bear the closest scrutiny.
