After three weeks of continual sunshine and fine spring weather, the spell was broken this morning by a warm rain, which finally terminated in a severe wind and rain storm, which has been raging for about six hours. The wheat growers report that a rain will be very beneficial in this part of the country in regards to plowing. Summer following commenced in earnest about two weeks ago and with the splendid weather conditions, it will be finished in good season. THE TOBACCO OCTOPUS

SIXTY-SIX CORPORATIONS ARE INVOLVED IN SUIT
Every Conceivable Business in Connection With the Tobacco Industry Is Carried on by Great Trust.

The American Tobacco Co. and its subsidiary companies, is probably the most versatile octopus of modern business trusts. It involves 66 corporations carrying on every conceivable business connected with the tobacco industry and 29 individuals.

Companies for the manufacture of cigars, cigarettes, chewing tobacco, snuff, licorice, pipes, cigar boxes, tin foil, vending machines, stationery, signs, stogies and corporations for the purchase and holding of tobacco properties in Cuba and Porto Rico, are the component parts of the combine.

It was first attacked by the government in the suit filed before the circuit court for the southern district of New York on July 10, 1907. A monster complaint covering several hundred closely printed pages, and embodying the work of several years of collection of evidence by department of justice agents, recited that the trust had been formed by a coalition of five cigarette companies in 1899, and had gradually grown in power through unfair competitive methods, until it dominated the tobacco world.

It was alleged that by a cooperative arrangement with foreign trusts, the American combine apportioned the tobacco business of the world; that it manipulated markets to suit its own purposes; controlled pseudo "independent" companies—concerns that advertised themselves as "not in the trust," when they were absolutely owned by the combine—that it imitated standard independent brands, and absorbed or destroyed competition by price-cutting.

As in the Standard Oil case, the tobacco litigation, which is soon to be decided by the supreme court, went to a master for the taking of testimony. Nearly a year was consumed in this task. It was on November 7, 1909, that the lower court rendered its opinion, partially upholding the government's contentions. It adjudged the tobacco combine a "trust in restraint of trade," but it dismissed as not proved the complaint against the United Cigar Stores Co. and the foreign tobacco monopolies. The government charged that the United Cigar Stores Co. was the retail outlet for the vast business of the combine, and that although the foreign companies were doing their principal business abroad, they also operated in the United States.

Both the Tobacco company and the government appealed from the decisions—the former seeking to have the entire decision set aside, and the government, in the hope of having it affirmed and strengthened by inclusion of the other companies.

The appeal was heard by the su-

PIGGIES BULLET MARKED.

Three in Dayton Litter and They Never Were Shot.
Dayton, Wash., March 24.—When Ike Rice, a Robinet mountain farmer, butchered in February, he shot his hogs instead of hitting them in the head with an ax, as is the general custom. Now he is the owner of two wee pigs of freakish characteristics. These pigs are "marked" with bullet holes in the foreheads.

Three of a litter of seven were born with the peculiar marking, but the existence of one was short. It gasped a few times and succumbed. The other two are living and are apparently in prime condition at three weeks. The mark in each case is near the center of the forehead, relatively at the same point where Mr. Rice shot his porkers. A thin skin has grown over the opening. The butchering was done in view of the sow which is the mother of the little pigs. Mr. Rice has hesitated to make his discovery public, but yesterday Laurence Benbow and Arnold Mock visited the Rice ranch and they vouch for the veracity of the story.
