FOR JUDGE LOWELL. Judge Lowell is offended and wants

o know why the term "knocker" has been applied to those who fought the school bond issue. The word "knocker" is a western term and it is exprossive. The meaning of the word is so clear that it needs no explanation here.

So it was sentiment, not judgment, that swung the election. The East Oregonian is surprised to hear such stuff from Judge Lowell. Why should 'sound business judgment' require this city to continue the use of a high school building that is so inadequate that the assembly room cannot hold the students even when they sit two in a single desk. Why should the young people of this city have to attend school in a building that cannot on properly heated, in which the walls are cracking and in which the plaster drops down from the ceiling endangering the very lives of those

What he takes to be "sound business parsimony and a live western town and other improvements.
