"We get some sad cases," said the attendant at the lunatic asylum of the interested visitor, and opened the door of the first cell. Inside was a man sitting on a three legged stool gazing vacantly at the wall.

SEATTLE YOUNG LADY HEROINE IN SECRET. Seattle, Wash., April 19.—Suffering in silence, refusing to tell her father of the circumstance to add to his worries, Joan Wapenstein, 18-year-old daughter of ex-Chief of Police Wapenstein, weeks ago gave up many inches of skin from her body to save the foot of her aunt, Miss Letta Benn, Aberdeen. Her own life was endangered for a time from blood poisoning.

Submitting to the taking away of her own skin to be grafted to the injured foot of her aunt, to whom she has been devoted since a child, the niece, under the guise of nursing the aunt, took her mother into her confidence only after the operation, but withheld the facts from the father while she submitted to the operation and occupied a cot adjoining that of her aunt at the Aberdeen hospital. Recovering, she came home and reported to her father that she had been ill after her long attention to the injured aunt. Chief Wapenstein was amazed when he heard of the circumstances today.

Miss Benn, daughter of Aberdeen's leading citizen, was in a launch two months ago and her left foot was caught in the shaft of the engine and the shoe was torn off. With it came the skin from the top and side of the foot. The young woman was taken home where her niece, Miss Wapenstein, was visiting at the time.

The automobile even when of the more humble sort, carries itself with a certain air of arrogance. It is about to meet with humiliation at the coronation. That will be the day of the horse. The greatest of the guests will not go to Westminster in cars, but will use horses. There is going to be enough of a return to horses to create a big problem for people.

It is said that even many others will buy horses to the number of sixty or seventy. Probably a good many others will buy, for the chief jobmasters are asking $480 for the hire of a pair of good carriage horses for the single day of the coronation. It will altogether be a curious and rather futile burst of energy for a passing phase of life. Carriage builders will enjoy a brief return of business. A few peeps, of whom Lord Crewe is one, are having real stake coaches built. Moreover, some people will certainly have to recall old pensioned coachmen for the day.

As at least two prisons in Paris, that for women, Saint Lazare, and the Petite Roquette, are scheduled for demolition and removal the question may be a live one in a short time.
