With Arizona and New Mexico in the American brotherhood of states, the flag will once more have a rearrangement of stars—six rows of eight stars each. The greatest addition to the stars in any one year occurred in 1882, when four were put on to represent Montana, Washington and the two Dakotas. Bids for Toledo's water system bonds will be opened May 10, and bids of contractors on May 15.

Orpheum. Pendleton's favorite picture theater. Vitagraph feature film for Sunday and Monday. Four full reels each performance. 1. "Though Your Sins be as Scarlet." Vitagraph. A dramatic symbolism. A picture sermon, that will teach all a good moral lesson. 2. "Beneath the Tower Ruins." Urban. A story of interest that is given to a servant by his master. The scenic qualities are very high and the picture is interesting. 3. "The Abbey of Favia, Italy." Urban. An interesting glimpse of monastic life. The monks at this famous Abbey pursue the even tude of their way just as their predecessors did when the monastic order played a more prominent part in men's affairs. 4. "The Burglar's Fee." American Pathé. A comedy drama that has many humorous as well as serious situations. It pictures an episode in the life of a doctor and his young wife. 5. "The Widow's Choice." Lubin. Harold and Jack Manning were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dorothy Loveland, a handsome widow. John Manning, their father, was an elderly widower who hadn't smiled on a woman for many years. One day Jack received a letter from his firm telling him to report at the office immediately, prepared for a business trip which would take him from home for at least a month. When Harold heard of these orders, he was naturally elated because Jack's absence would give him a good opportunity to make the final plea for the widow's hand. This is as pretty a love comedy as has ever been produced.

The Pastime. The house of quality. For Sunday's change a program that will please you. Special, "Zululand," by Selg. A remarkable picture in which wild animals such as lions, tigers, leopards, elephants, etc., contribute to the realism of the scene. "Zululand" is a full length film, but the interest in it is so great that it does not appear to be more than half length to the spectator. When the trekking party camp at night, in the trees, two wild, free lions, come out and rob it of meat. We see a white man chased by Zulu warriors, running for dear life and escaping just by the skin of his teeth. Next a battle between the pursuers and English soldiers who guard a hospital. This fight is no game affair I can assure you. Then the excitement is heightened by the catching on fire of the hospital building.

Friday and Saturday: 1. "His Younger Brother." Thanhouser. A story of more than usual power, worked out through a number of perfectly clear situations. That a girl should don boy's clothes and take her brother's place is not novel, but in this instance she learns that the employer is not a villain, but that her brother was to blame. Then a love affair follows, the brother is given another opportunity and the picture has a happy close. 2. "Come Back to Erin." Powers. Another delightful story of old Ireland. A young heiress is in danger of losing her estate through the schemes of a wicked squire. Through several thrilling scenes the plot unfolds, but finally all is well. The heiress gets her estate and the young man gets the heiress. A peasant story which keeps one interested and in good humor. 3. "Was He Justified?" Bison. This is a strong western story, so entirely out of the ordinary and so full of thrills that one follows it with breathless interest to the end. It leaves the audience in the unique position of being the jury that decides this man's innocence or guilt. See this great picture and then ask yourself "What would I have done Was he justified?" 4. "A Postal Delay." One of the funniest comedies you ever saw. A young man receives a pheasant from his uncle and invites his friends to partake. While the cook is out a dog steals the pheasant and she substitutes a chicken. After eating the supposed pheasant a delayed letter is received saying the bird died of a very contagious disease. The guests are horror-stricken, till the cook explains the situation. 5. "Foolishness at a Cock Fight." Italia. This popular comedian is funnier than ever in this picture. Besides being funny the picture is full of interest as it actually shows a cock fight. (Special feature for Sunday.

OSTRICH PROUD OF EGGS. Bird is So Noisy That She May Land in Jail. Bellingham, Wash.—W. F. Williams, a resident of Wildwood, a suburb of Bellingham, complained to Chief of Police Linkins this afternoon that his family has been reduced to a state of nervous collapse by the incessant cackling of a hen ostrich which laid an egg the day before yesterday and has been making a noisy and vainglorious exhibition of herself ever since. "I threw a rock at the ostrich," said Williams, "but, of course, that did no good, as the big bird simply rammed her head into the sand and let me throw. And you simply have to hit an ostrich in the head to do any good." Chief Linkins advised the man to swear out a warrant for the offending bird and bring her into court. The big plume producer against which Williams complained is one of a herd of ten recently brought to this city from California.

RUSSIAN SYMPHONY ORCHES- TRIA AT WALLA WALLA MAY 17 On the 17th of May the Walla Walla chapter of the American Woman's league is to bring the Russian Symphony Orchestra to the Keylor Grand in Walla Walla. Among the great Symphony Orchestras of the United States, none has equaled in development or surpassed the lofty artistic purpose of the Russian Symphony Orchestra. That it has won its front rank position through sheer merit is now established to the satisfaction of the most exacting. Just half of this orchestra was on the coast with the Ben Gnet company in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and those who had the good fortune to hear them then will realize what a great treat it is to see what a great organization brings with it four soloists of note, Nina Dimitrieff, soprano, attracted the attention of Queen Helen of Italy and later the Dowager Russian Empress, upon hearing Mme. Dimitrieff sing, snatched a bracelet of gold from her arm and presented it to the youthful artist. Frank Ormsby has gained a position on his own merit as an artist and has one of the most delightful tenor voices ever heard. Madam Hulse is blessed with a true contralto voice of that delightful quality so seldom encountered. It is effective throughout its entire compass. Betram S. Cehrahn has a virile, well controlled baritone voice that is always to be relied upon and his work marked by intelligence, temperamental warmth and finish. A large crowd from Pendleton is anticipated attending this concert as they can go over and return the same evening. Orders for tickets should be sent in through Miss Young, Association building, at once as good seats reservations will have to be made early to insure good seats. Phone Black 3321 or address Keylor Grand.
