CORRECTING CHILDREN.

In the account, in the May McClure's of Maria Montessori, the Italian woman who has made such revolutionary changes in the modern system of education, one of her basic rules—that of abstention from correction—is explained as follows: "Why correct the child? If she does not succeed in associating the name with the object, the only way of making her succeed is to repeat at once the action of the sensorial stimulus, and the word to be associated with it; that is, to repeat the lesson. But the fact of the child having made the mistake implies that at that moment she is not disposed to the psychic association which you desire to provoke in her; hence it is best to choose another moment. "In Maria Montessori's review, all education worth having is auto-education. One of the difficulties experienced in the training of teachers is that of preventing them from rushing to the aid of a child who appears to be embarrassed and puzzled in one of his little employments. Their tendency is to say, 'Poor little mite!' and help him out; thereby depriving the child at once of the joy and the education of overcoming an obstacle."

Help for All

Andrew Carnegie once suggested as an epitaph for his own tombstone what he said was the secret of his success: "Here lies a man who surrounded himself with men abler than himself."

Many able people are working for you, scientists, inventors, manufacturers, all trying to make something you want. Do you use their brains and their efforts—"surround yourself with them"—or do you plod along by yourself, years behind the times?

Take your own home. Have you your share of modern improvements there—money-saving, labor-saving, health-promoting? One of the most important of these is a New Perfection Oil Cook-stove.

A New Perfection stove never overheats a kitchen. It saves your strength. It saves fuel and time. With the New Perfection oven with the glass doors you can go on with your ironing or any other work, and still be sure at a glance the joint is roasting properly.

Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners, with long, turquoise enamel chimneys. Handsomely finished throughout. The 2- and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without a cabinet top, which is fitted with drop shelves, towel racks, etc.

LONDON'S DIALECT.

A Perfectly Recognizable Child of the Old Kentish Tongue.
In a little book entitled "London's Dialect" Mr. Mackenzie Macbride challenges the view expressed by the education department of the London county council that "there is no London dialect of reputable antecedents and origin," and that "the cockney mode of speech is a modern corruption."
He points out that the London dialect, especially on the south side of the Thames, is a perfectly recognizable child of the old Kentish tongue, to which we owe our earliest written literature. "Thet" for "that," "bank" for "bank," "keb" for "cab," are remnants of the old Kentish mode of pronunciation.

In the Kentish dialect "that" was spelt "thet" as early as A. D. 825. The use of "t" for "d," as in "tidy," was common from the Trent to the Thames in Elizabeth's time, and John Stow, writing in 1580, gives us "bylyffe" for "ballyff." The use of "au" for "a" in such cockneys as "telegraph" is of very old origin, and "abait" and "abside" are both warranted by ancient use. As for "kep" and "slep" without the final "t," they are really uncorrupted words, the "t" being an intruder of late date.

TORTURE BY WATER.

The "Bird Degree" in Sorcery Cases in Louis XIV's Time.

One of the methods adopted by Louis XIV, to purge his kingdom of sorcery was the "question ordinaire." This, according to G. Duval in "shadows of Old Paris," consisted in having two bits of water poured into the body.

"The executioner placed the prisoner in a prominent position, directly in front of the public. A block was slipped under the neck, so that the head and stomach were thrown outward and upward, while the carcass of a measure of two pints were forced by means of a hose down the victim's mouth. If he resisted his nose was held until he opened his mouth to breathe. After every two pints were given he was given a few seconds' rest and the operation to be repeated. If he continued his denial the question was repeated until the whole ten pints had been consumed.

"In the 'question extraordinaire' the quantity administered was augmented to twenty pints. The swelling caused by this unnatural amount of liquid in the body produced the most acute agony."

Knew the Risks.

Chloe, a huge black cook of middle age, came to her mistress one day with the announcement that she was about to be married. Regretting the loss of an excellent cook and having real interest in Chloe's welfare, her mistress said:

"I hope, Chloe, you appreciate the fact that marriage is a serious thing and you have considered carefully in regard to the step you are about to take. Marriage brings great responsibility."

"Deed it does, ma'am!" said Chloe, with emphasis. "I reckon I knows, fo' I's been mabbed fo' times. I knows just what reeks fo' takes when yo' done git mabbed. My last divo'ce cost me twenty-five dollars, but I made him pay half of it. Yo' never know what yo' is gittin' into when yo' gits mabbed."—Washington Star.

Ruins of Yucatan.

The explorations of Arthur Diosy in Yucatan brought to light many new facts about the stupendous ruins which stretch through the country in a chain 200 miles long. The most amazing thing about these ruins, according to Mr. Diosy, is that the people who possessed such high architectural skill and the knowledge of rich and graceful decorative arts, belonged to the stone age and had no knowledge of metals. These wonders in stone were carved with flint implements and a civilization which has been compared to that of Egypt grew up without even the use of bronze and iron.

Turned the Tables.

Two hunters, returning from the Catskills, decided to try some New York city humor upon the agent of a little railroad station in the foothills. "When does the 3:40 train get in?" asked one.
The old man regarded him seriously and at length. "Waal," said he, "she generally gets in just a leetle behind the engine."

Later they approached him respectfully. "About time that train is due, isn't it, uncle?"
"Yes," said the agent, "she's about due. There comes the conductor's dog."—Everybody's.

Dauntless.

"He cleared the sill at a bound and vanished in the darkness," related Romance breathlessly.

"But," scoffed Realism, "only a moment ago he was riveted to the spot. Did he file the rivets?"
"Oh, no!" rejoined Romance, nothing daunted. "Fortunately it was only a small spot, so that by a superhuman effort he wrenched it loose and carried it along with him."—Puck.

Result of a Fad.

Poverty came in at the door. Love immediately flew out of the window.

"Ah," said those who observed, "this is what comes of being fresh air fad-dists!"—Judge's Library.

HELP INDIANS IMPROVE LAND.

French Has Bill to Relieve Kootenai Valley Redmen.

Washington.—Congressman French of Idaho will introduce a bill in congress tomorrow to bring a large number of Indians belonging to no tribe and residing in Kootenai valley, Idaho, within the state law in order that they may make improvements on the lands over which the government holds a 25-year guardianship. There are many of these and the present status of debts does not allow them to improve their lands and prevents their white neighbors from getting drainage outlets through the Indian lands.

WHEAT GROWS RANK ON PALOUSE SOIL.

Pullman, Wash.—Wheat is growing so rank in this part of the country that farmers are pasturing their fall wheat to keep it from getting too rank and heavy. Samuel H. Breese, living five miles south of Pullman, will start to mow his winter wheat just as soon as the surface of the ground dries to permit the mower to run over it.

Pasturing winter wheat has frequently been necessary in this section but only on occasions when the growth is unusually rank has it been found necessary to mow it. Mr. Breese always pastures or mows his winter wheat in the spring and during the past three years has had average yields on large fields of 48, 54 and 63 bushels to an acre.

GHOST IN NEW JERSEY TOWN.

Apparition Keeps Nervous Residents Home at Night.

Beverly, N. J. — Bridgeport, the home of whitehoar and ghost scares, had another sensation which the residents take seriously, and after night-fall the streets are deserted. John Johnson and a party of friends, passing what is known as the Paxon pits a few nights ago, were confronted by a apparition which they declared, climbed out of the pit. For a minute it lingered and then, giving a shriek, vanished into the woods. Other witnesses, farmers of unquestionable veracity, substantiate Johnson's story.

The old residents say that years ago a reserved man who lived on the outskirts of the village, and whose name never was learned, as the family would not mingle with the villagers, had a deformed son.

The man was driving along the country road, when the carriage was supposed to have overturned and the child fell into the pit and broke its neck. The version of the accident was accepted, but wild rumors were afloat at the time. Those who have seen the specter describe it as a boy whose head seems to hang limp upon his chest.
